Paris Parley Is Guarded By Curtain Of Secrecy

Foreign Ministers Want to Be Sure Marshall Proposal Talks Don't 'Leak'

By John O'Reilly

Paris, June 27.—Negotiations carried on in greater secrecy than has attended any recent international conference were started this afternoon when the foreign ministers of France, Britain and Russia met.

They discussed the proposal of Secretary of State George C. Marshall that Europe prepare itself for economic reconstruction through American aid.

The only official announcement resulting from the first meeting of the three foreign ministers at the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs was that they had agreed that the proceedings were secret and that no public announcement concerning the discussions would be made until a later date.

It was learned that Ernest Bevin, British Foreign Secretary, who arrived this morning, came with the determination to stress speed and to implement that speed by keeping the talks secret until some decision had been reached.

Comment on Weather

When accosted in the lobby after the first meeting and asked if he had anything to say about the meeting, Bevin almost shouted, "Not a word." Then, as though in apology for his forceful abruptness, he smiled and said, "All I can tell you is that the weather in Paris is slightly hotter than in London, but not much."

Today's meeting, held in the Parrot Room of the Quai d'Orsay, included Bevin, Georges Bidault, French Minister of Foreign affairs, and Viacheslav M. Molotov, Soviet Foreign Minister, and six assistants for each of them.

The French and British press representatives who are usually let in on meetings were kept out this time. Raymond Offroy, press representative of the French Foreign Ministry, even kept himself apart from his own staff, apparently in the fear that he might let something slip before the first meeting was ended.

Reds Bring Big Staff

It was evident that the Russians had come to this meeting heavily prepared to hold up their end of the negotiations. When all heads were counted it turned out that the Russians had brought in a total staff of 91 persons, including Molotov and Alexander Bogomolov Soviet Ambassador at Paris, who came from Moscow with the delegation. This was considerable more than the group of between 50 and 60 which represented Russia at the meeting of the Big Four in Paris last summer.

Indirect sources indicated that if it came down to claiming percentages of what American aid might ultimately accrue, Russia was in a position to prove that she was entitled to about 80 per cent of it on the basis of wrecked economy, war damage and general need. The presence of so many Russian representatives, including several dozen clerks, stenographers, interpreters and assistants indicated to some that the Russians were ready to go about the formation of committees of various kinds, a procedure which led to the ultimate dissolution of previous conferences.

Inasmuch as no agenda had been

3 Neighbors Blamed

U. N. May Have to Use Force On Greek Guerillas, Austin Says

Lake Success, June 27 (AP).—The United States told the Security Council today the Council would be called upon to use force, if necessary, to stop anti-Greek activities of the three Soviet Balkan satellites—Yugoslavia, Albania and Bulgaria.

In the toughest language used thus far by an American in the Council, Warren R. Austin, chief United States delegate, directly accused Greek's northern neighbors of "using force against the territorial integrity and political independence of Greece."

If thees activities could not be stopped by peaceful means, Austin said, the United Nations had no other course left except to invoke "enforcement action." This, however, should be done only after other means failed, he added.

Austin made his declaration as the Council opened debate on the voluminous report of the U. N. Balkan investigating committee, which found Yugoslavia, Albania and Bulgaria primarily responsible for the present Balkan disorders.

Seated at the Council table as he spoke were representatives of the three accused countries and Greece. They listened attentively as the former Senator from Vermont backed up the findings of the commission and demanded immediate measures to end the Balkan tension.

Austin proposed formally that the Council send an 11-nation commission to the Balkans to keep constant watch over the situation for at least two years and urged that the U. N. body be given full authority to enter any of the four Balkan countries at any time to investigate incidents.

Although he made no mention of the possibility that a Russian veto might nullify any action on the Balkan question, this obviously was uppermost in the minds of the delegates as they began work on the commission's report. Russia voted in the commission against both the findings of the majority and against recommendations for creation of a U. N. commission such as Austin now has proposed to the parent Security Council.

Whatever plans the Russians had, however, remained a secret. After Austin's speech, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko told reporters:

"I have nothing to say—for the time being."

The four Balkan countries then were called upon to make statements. Vassili Dendramis, Greek

Senate Passes Succession Bill By 50 to 35

Measure Would Make Martin Next in Line For White House

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate yesterday approved a new line of succession to the Presidency, in effect making Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr. (R., Mass.), next in line to the White House if anything happens to President Truman.

The final vote was 50 to 35 with Democrats opposing it, almost as a party. Ironically it was virtually the same bill recommended by the President when Democrats were in control of Congress. That would have made the then Democratic Speaker of the House, Sam Rayburn, heir-apparent.

House passage of a companion measure within a week was predicted by House Judiciary Chairman Earl C. Michener (R. Mich.). The House had passed the President's original succession bill last session, but it stalled in the Senate. The Senate at that time proposed a joint committee study of the whole dilemma. The House let that proposal die.

Order of Succession

Designed to meet a situation without parallel in American history—a vacancy caused by the death or removal both of the regularly elected President and the Vice President who succeeds him—the bill gives first the Speaker of the House and next the President pro Tempore of the Senate precedence over the present Cabinet line of succession.

The Secretary of State, who is now first in line, would act as President only if the Speaker or Senate President failed to qualify, and so down through the Cabinet line. If a Speaker later qualified, however, he would step into the White House until the end of the current presidentital term.

Senate Democratic Leader Alben W. Barkley (Ky.) led the fight on the change. Barkley challenged whether either the Speaker or Senate President were Federal "officers" in the constitutional sense. He said he fought it even when his friend Sam Rayburn would have been the beneficiary.

Hatch Move Fails

Senator Carl A. Hatch (D., N. Mex.) unsuccessfully sought to recommit the bill. Hatch said there could be no "emergency" so long as Secretary of State George C. Marshall is designated by present law to fill any White House vacancy. Hatch said the proposed shift would bring "complete chaos."

Senate Republican Whip Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) author of the measure, turned the Presi-

Navy Warns Congress on Oil Shortage

Post Reporter

The Navy put Congress on notice yesterday that United States oil reserves for the fleet are dangerously low from the standpoint of national security.

A three-pronged attack on the oil shortage problem was immediately launched.

1. The Senate voted to continue until July 15 control authorization over exports and imports pending a final determination of the issue. Otherwise controls would expire June 30.

2. Chairman Alvin F. Weichel (R., Ohio) of the House Merchant Marine Committee introduced a bill to clamp rigid controls on all exports of petroleum products to foreign countries.

3. Chairman Owen Brewster (R., Me.) introduced a resolution to investigate the entire oil shortage situation, includin exports, domestic transportation difficulties, and the Navy's purchase of Arabian American oil.

Export Data Asked

Weichel called upon Secretary of Commerce Harriman to identify all American oil companies which have sold petroleum products to foreign countries during the last 18 months.

In a letter to Brewster, Acting Secretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan reported that "the reserves on the East Coast are inadequate to meet an emergency."

Earlier, Capt. Ralph E. Wilson, deputy Navy representative on the Joint Army-Navy Petroleum Board, warned the House committee that the U. S. fleet "might be largely immobilized" if oil imports were shut off during a war.

Russian Exports Cleared

Wilson and Col. G. H. Vogel, joint board executive officer, testified that present oil shipments to Russia were not major factors in difficulties of the Army and Navy getting enough oil.

In the letter to Brewster, Sullivan said that the fleet could not assume "a position compatible with the Navy's obligations for national security" until late this year despite efforts to build up petroleum stocks.

Weichel, who has been strongly critical of oil shipments to Russia, told the House:

"There must be positive bans and restrictions by the Congress to stop the flow of gasoline and petroleum to foreign nations. The President should not have the continued discretion to export gasoline and petroleum."

Weichel's bill would ban ex-

Son of Transit Official

D. C. Youth, 22, Is Charged With Raping 17-Year-Old Girl

Fleet S. Hughlett, jr., 22, son of a Capital Transit Co. official, was arrested yesterday and charged with the rape of a 17-year-old girl.

Police said Hughlett, whose father is chief adjuster in the claim department of the Capital Transit Co., was asked to appear at police headquarters yesterday after parents of the girl had made a complaint.

After questioning by members of the Sex Squad, the youth was taken to the First Precinct Station and booked on the rape charge.

According to police, the alleged attack took place the night of Saturday, June 14, although it was not reported until Thursday, June 26.

They said the girl told them she was out on her second date with Hughlett that night and that he assaulted her in a car in the northwest section of the city near the District line.

Police said there is some doubt whether the alleged rape took place in the District or in Maryland, but that, pending classification of the question, the case will be handled in this jurisdiction.

Hughlett was identified by police as a student living at 7800 Morningside dr. nw.

In another case yesterday, police charged Edward E. Fling, 20, of 3525 O st. nw., with assault with intent to rape on the complaint of a married woman living in the 1300 block of 36th st. nw.

Labor Plots War Against Foes of Veto

CIO Chief Murray Summons Leaders, Rips Taft-Hartley Act at Conference

By the United Press

CIO President Philip Murray said yesterday he would ask all leaders of organized labor to meet with him at an early date to formulate a "joint political action program" to defeat all members of Congress who voted to override President Truman's Taft-Hartley Labor Act veto.

He pledged the CIO to "an unswerving determination that this infamous law must be erased from the statute books." But he said its members would comply with existing collective bargaining obligations.

"We expect the employers likewise to respect those obligations," he added.

Krug Has Doubts

Murray ripped the new law up and down at a news conference shortly after Secretary of the Interior Julius A. Krug said that only new Congressional action could provide an effective way to halt a national coal strike next month.

Krug, whose agency loses control of the soft coal mines at midnight Monday, told reporters that "this will be an opportunity to see what the Taft-Hartley law will do in a coal strike." But he doubted whether it would prove effective, and said he had no suggestions to offer Congress for a possible legislative remedy.

To Stick by Contracts

The CIO boss, whose executive board met most of the day to talk about the act and decide what policy to adopt toward it, insisted that his organization would stick by its existing contracts.

And he reaffirmed the CIO's disapproval of all suggestions for a general strike in protest against the new law.

AFL President William Green cold shouldered similar ideas yesterday, although about 225,000 members of one major unit in his organization — John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers—have been staging wildcat protest walkouts since a few hours after the law went on the statute books.

Murray said Senators and Representatives who voted to override Mr. Truman's veto did so "willfully and deliberately," and that they were guilty of "placing the power and authority of Government into the hands of organized anti-union employers for the purpose of smashing organized labor."

Up to Member Unions

He said the CIO would leave up to its international unions and their local units the question whether they will resort to the National Labor Relations Board as now established, and whether they will file with that agency the required financial statements and affidavits of non-Communism.

At the same time, the executive board pledged its support to the current shipyard workers' strike, a step-up in union organizing campaigns throughout the country, and strengthening of the CIO's political action committee.

"Nothing in the Taft-Hartley Act will deter us in our organizing campaign," he said.

He gave newsmen a brief statement—obviously in reply to Mr. Truman's request for cooperation for all sides—declaring:

"If employers choose . . . to employ the Taft-Hartley bill for the purpose of frustrating the bargaining obligations and renewing their asault upon unions then the

16 Guilty of House Contempt; State Dept. Fires 10 as Risky; Marzani and Eisler Sentenced

Five of Dismissed Employes Are From Upper Pay Bracket; No Appeal Possible

The State Department yesterday announced the dismissal of 10 employes as bad security risks.

An official statement said "derogatory information" about the 10 had been developed through investigation.

"In taking this action," the followed its policy of dropping employes from the rolls where substantial doubt existed as to their security. In a few of the cases other administrative considerations also entered into the decision to terminate the employes concerned."

[International News Service said, meanwhile, it had learned that the State Department in the past few months has released an additional 70 employes because of "derogatory information" concerning them which had been uncovered in investigations.

[Commerce Department officials disclosed, the INS said, that two employes had been forced to resign and that the names of two persons awaiting appointment had been eliminated in a crackdown on subversives.—Editor's Note.]

There is no possibility of indictments or further action against the 10, an informed source told The Post yesterday. Nothing indictable was said to have been proved against any of them, but security doubts could not be disproved, and the dismissals were ordered as the safest course.

Five of the 10 were in comparatively high salary brackets ranging from $5900 to $9360. Three were reported to have been in the Office of International Information and Cultural Affairs, which has been under ceaseless congressional fire for allegedly harboring Communists.

Lincoln White, State Department press officer, said dismissal of the 10 did not necessarily concern their loyalty, but rather "their discretion and the company they keep." Their names were carefully withheld on the ground that publication would be grossly unfair to individuals against whom no charge could be proved.

The employes involved had no opportunity within the department to defend themselves, and have no right of appeal. The State, War and Navy Departments and the Atomic Energy Commission are entitled to dismiss employes summarily without observing Civil Service safeguards.

Although the State Department has elaborate security mechanisms, there is as yet no committee or other mechanism before which a suspected employe can state his case.

It is understood that Secretary Marshall examined the records in the present cases before approving the dismissal orders.

Forrestal's Son Thrown From Horse

Lander, Wyo., June 27 (AP).—Peter Forrestal, 16-year-old son of Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal, was injured today when thrown from a horse at the Double Diamond stock and dude ranch at Dubois.

At Bishop Randall Hospital his condition was not considered serious. The youth suffered chest and shoulder injuries.

Former OSS Man Denied Bond; Alleged Red Agent Gets Limit

Attorney Protests Action; Statement Cites Nazi Trials

Carl Aldo Marzani, former OSS employe, yesterday was sentenced to serve one to three years in prison for concealing Communist affiliations while working for the Government.

Sentence was imposed by Associate Justice Richmond B. Keech in District Court. Keech denied bond to Marzani and he was led off to begin his term immediately.

Marzani's attorney, Charles E. Ford expressed amazement that bond was denied. "Gerhart Eisler (described as No. 1 Communist in the United States, convicted of contempt) was allowed bond pending appeal, and so was Eugene Dennis (Communist Party secretary awaiting sentence for contempt) allowed bond," Ford pointed out.

Keech, as he imposed sentence, declared that the fact that Marzani was a Communist was not an issue involved.

"However," he said, "the Government has a right to correct information" concerning its employes, "particularly in time of emergency."

Defiance Draws Year, $1000 Fine By Justice Holtzoff

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Gerhart Eisler, said to be the kingpin Communist agent in America, was sentenced yesterday to serve a year in jail and pay a $1000 fine for contempt of Congress.

The sentence is the maximum possible for the offense. However, Eisler was freed under $20,000 bond pending appeal.

Justice Alexander Holtzoff of District Court said the severe punishment was justified because Eisler, despite his guilt, remained "defiant . . . contemptuous . . . and did not show respect for the institutions of this Government."

Eisler was convicted June 10 for refusal to testify before the House Un-American Activities Committee unless he could first make a preliminary statement. He now faces trial here July 7 on passport fraud charges.

Before sentencing Eisler, Justice Holtzoff accused Defense Attorney Carol King of making "untrue statements" in an effort to get the justice to disqualify himself from

Joint Anti-Fascist Committee Leaders Face $1000 Fines, Year in Prison

Post Reporter

Dr. Edward K. Barsky and 15 other officials of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee yesterday were found guilty of contempt of Congress in District Court.

The jury brought in the verdict at 4 p. m., after deliberating an hour and five minutes. The charge, a misdemeanor, carries a maximum penalty of one year's imprisonment and a $1000 fine. Bond of $500 apiece was continued by Associate Justice Richmond B. Keech pending motion for a new trial.

Indictment of the group followed their failure to supply records of their organization, as subpenaed, to the House Committee on Un-American Activities on April 4.

Deny Control of Records

The defendants had steadfastly denied that they had control of the records.

This control, they said, was vested in Miss Helen Bryan, executive secretary of the Joint Anti-Fascist Committee, now under separate indictment for contempt.

Those on the executive board of the committee, convicted yesterday were, besides Barsky, a New York surgeon, Howard Fast, author; Herman Sumlin, theatrical producer; Louise Kamsly, Dr. Louis Miller and Dr. Joseph Auslander, physicians; Dr. Lyman R. Bradley, professor of romance languages, New York University; James Lustig, official of the CIO electrical workers' union; Dr. Jesse Tolmach, dermatologist on the staff of Columbia University; Manuel Magana, a veteran of the Spanish Civil War who fought on the side of the Loyalists; Ruth Leider and Harry M. Justiz, lawyers, and Marjorie Chodorov and Mrs. Bobbie Weinstein, housewives. All are from New York City.

Assails House Committee

After the verdict was announced by Jury Foreman Sargent C. Elliott, 1621 T st. nw., Defense Attorney O. John Rogge requested the jury be polled. This was done. The defendants listened intently as each juror pronounced "guilty" to the roll call.

Rogge delivered a blast at the House Committee in telling reporters he would either file a motion to throw out the verdict or ask for a new trial.

"I will take this case to the Supreme Court if necessary to prove the House Committee on Un-American Activities is unconstitutional the attorney said.

On Thursday, the defendants were cleared of the more serious charge of conspiracy to commit

Vote of 222 to 78 Returns Measure To Conference Today

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

By a 222 to 78 vote, the House said finally yesterday it will not let the District collect an income tax from Federal employes here who have domiciles in a State.

The House vote tossed the Washington revenue bill, whittled to a total around 12 million dollars, back to a joint conference committee.

The conference will meet at noon today in the Senate District Committee room at the Capitol. Leaders said the only route open was for the Senate, which earlier unanimously overrode the Federal employe tax exemption, to accept it.

Earlier, both houses gave final clearance for the Washington teachers' pay raise bill to go to the White House. The bill gives most teachers a $150 annual increase over present salaries, effective Tuesday. Final action came with agreement in both houses to a conference report adjusting minor differences.

Hour-Long Debate

House action on the tax bill came after a battling hour-long debate in which District Committee leaders bid in vain for a decision against the Federal employe exemption.

One immediate result, according to House District Appropriations Chairman Walt Horan (R., Wash.) was that the city budget for next year must be kept within a ceiling of 96 million dollars. House Appropriations Chairman John Taber (R., N. Y.) said his committee plans to send the city budget bill to the House floor a week from Monday.

For future results, Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.), Senate handler of the revenue bill, had declared House insistence on exempting Federal employes should be followed by a move to repeal

Witnesses May Keep Red Secret

Politics Held No Business Of Grand Jury

Grand jury witnesses cannot be compelled to testify as to whether they are Communists, Justice David A. Pine of District Court ruled yesterday.

To rule otherwise, said the justice, would undermine the constitutional safeguard against self-incrimination. The decision is a precedent, court attaches agreed.

The constitutional privilege freed Emil Costello, CIO union official from Wisconsin, from testifying as to possible Communist affiliations, before the District grand jury. For some weeks this body has been probing the case against two officials of the United Auto Workers Union (CIO) at the Allis-Chalmers plant in West Allis, Wis.

Under Investigation

Under investigation are Harold Christoffel and Robert Buse. They told a House Labor Committee they had never been Communists. Committee members declared they had evidence that this constituted perjury.

When he appeared earlier this week before the grand jury, Costello refused to testify on questions which might have linked him with the Communist Party. He claimed his constitutional privilege against self-incrimination.

He was taken before Justice Pine for instructions as to whether he had to testify on these subjects.

Holds Party Legal

John Pratt, special assistant to the Attorney General, argued that there was no possibility of self-incrimination since Costello was not being investigated and since the Communist Party was a legal organization.

Costello's attorney, Joseph Forer, argued that numerous officials of Congress had declared the Communist Party was an illegal body, should be outlawed and that

Measure Aimed At Reds Becomes Law in Michigan

Lansing, Mich., June 27 (AP).—Gov. Kim Sigler signed into law today a bill requiring the registration of any organization influenced or dominated by a foreign power—a measure declared by its legislative sponsors to be aimed at Communists.

Described by the Governor as a "good bill," it gives the Attorney General of Michigan authority to take control of any labor union or corporation or other group which he, the Attorney General of the United States, or Congress may declare to be dominated by foreign influences and to hold its funds until the membership elects officers loyal to the United States.

Sigler said, "I see nothing in the claim that it will drive Communists underground because the dangerous parts of the Communists groups already are underground and have been . . . I don't believe it will be used to persecute people because that could be applied to any bill."

Seven Are Promoted

Truscott Gets Barrett's Job As Detective Bureau Head

The District Commissioners yesterday appointed Capt. Floyd A. Truscott as chief of the Detective Bureau. He succeeds Inspector Robert J. Barrett, who will be sworn in Tuesday as police superintendent.

The naming of Truscott, who was also promoted to the rank of inspector with a salary of $6894, was among the seven promotions and six permanent rank appointments made in the Metropolitan Police force at the recommendation of the new superintendent.

Lieut. Loraine T. Johnson was promoted to captain with a salary of $5023, to fill the vacancy in that rank due to Truscott's promotion.

Barrett and Acting Superintendent Walter H. Thomas conferred with the Commissioners yesterday morning before the changes, effective Tuesday, were announced. Orders for the promotions and appointments were signed by Thomas as acting superintendent. Thomas will continue as second in command, with the title of executive officer and assistant superintendent, while Truscott will be third in command, also with the title of assistant superintendent, the Commissioners revealed.

Truscott, whose appointment as chief of detectives was predicted in The Washington Post yesterday, will be 47 in August. A native Kansan, he came to Washington at the age of 11, joined the police force in 1925 and worked on several well-known murder cases. He served more than four years in Navy Intelligence emerging as commander to take command of the Second Precinct. He became captain of the Thirteenth Precinct last July 1.

Johnson, who is 46 and lives at 308 Aspen st. nw., has been attached to the traffic division for the past 15 years. A native of Frederick, Md., he is one of the only two District policemen to have won a $650 James S. Kemper fellowship to attend the Traffic Institute at Northwestern University, from which he graduated on June 18. He is married and has one child.

Other changes announced by the Commissioners were:

Temporary Lieut. Charles J. Sullivan, 44, 1006 Urell pl. ne., now on the desk at the Detective Bureau, given permanent rank at $4278 to succeed Johnson. A member of the force since January, 1931, he is married and has four children. He served four years in the Coast Guard with the rank of lieutenant commander.

Plea for Simplification

Tests Show Air Instruments Need Revision, Scientist Says

Disclosure that 100 experienced Army fliers required seven seconds to read a regulation altimeter was made here yesterday by a Wright Field doctor.

The pilots tested made errors in 15 per cent of the readings—some as much as 1000 feet.

These statements were made by Dr. P. M. Fitts, chief of the psychological division of Wright Field's aero-medical section, in an appeal for simplified instrument panels on aircraft.

Dr. Fitts appeared before a one-day meeting of the Committee on Selection and Training of Aircraft Pilots at the National Academy of Sciences, 2101 Connecticut ave. nw.

He said tests of the same 100 pilots were made with simplified instruments and wide improvement was noted.

Earlier in the day, a psychological study of the behavior of skilled pilots was explained as a basis for selecting future applicants.

The speaker was Thomas Gordon, of the American Institute for Research at the University of Pittsburgh.

Objective of the pilot study, which began last March, is to determine what possible skills, characteristics and traits are possessed by today's operating pilots. Final conclusions will form the basis for testing of airline pilot applicants.

The study, conducted in 20 cities

Rep. Jones Calls Pearson a Liar

In Senate

Compromise Would Add 'Voice' Funds

A compromise which would add $470,000 to the State Department's appropriation for the "Voice of America" has been tentatively agreed upon by both sides, The Post learned yesterday.

Senator Joseph Ball (R., Minn.), chairman of the subcommittee handling the bill, said he would introduce an amendment to add $470,000 for the International Broadcasting Division under the Office of Information and Culture, if a floor fight over the measure can thus be avoided.

The additional funds would be for the maintenance of some personnel who would otherwise be dropped, Ball declared.

Floor Plan Set

He said that the increase would permit OIC to continue its own programs to Russia, Eastern Europe and Germany, as well as some Asiatic countries instead of turning the job over to the private networks.

The plan now is for the question of the needed additional funds to be raised by Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) when the measure comes to the Senate for action. Ball will then introduce the amendment, provided that a last-minute battle over the bill can be avoided.

Ball said he did not believe the Senate would be able to get to the appropriation measure until next Tuesday. The program would ordinarily be scheduled to fold up Monday, June 30.

The Senate, however, yesterday passed a resolution introduced by Chairman Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) providing for continuation of the powers of Government agencies to spend funds as well as obligate for future expenditures for a month. It is anticipated the House will follow suit to avoid entanglement over long-delayed appropriation measures.

Adoption of the compromise plan indicates very clearly that the Senate leadership, as GOP spokesmen have stated, has no intention of pressing for passage this session of the House-passed Mundt bill to give the OIC legal status.

Senator H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.), chairman of Foreign Relations Subcommittee, said hearings on the Mundt measure would open next Wednesday.

July Is Crowding

There was general agreement among GOP spokesmen that the Mundt bill could gain floor consideration this session only if it were marked "emergency" and they do not think there is any chance of that.

A tentative adjournment date of July 26 has already been set, and both houses are rushing through a crowded calendar to meet it.

The Senate appropriations bill carries with it a request for consent to authorize the OIC program as a stopgap for the Mundt measure. Since the House adopted the Mundt bill by a three-to-one vote, it is believed House conferees will feel fre to adopt the Senate requstd amendment.

Columnist Testifies FCC Nominee Is 'Possibly' Klansman

By the United Press

Representative Robert F. Jones (R., Ohio) yesterday denied as "unmitigated lies" charges by Columnist Drew Pearson that he was a member of the Black Legion and possibly of the Ku Klux Klan.

The heated exchange highlighted a Senate Commerce subcommittee's hearing on Jones' nomination to succeed Ray C. Wakefield to a seven-year term on the Federal Communications Commission.

Pearson expressed "doubt" that Jones, as an FCC member, would give him and his associates a fair hearing on their application for a Baltimore radio station license. He said he based the statement on "evidence" from Jones' own Lima, Ohio, district.

Alleges Link With Smith

Jones, he said, "has been personally identified with one of the most anti-Semitic, Fascist-inclined figures in this country—namely, Gerald L. K. Smith."

Furthermore, he said, while he had no personal knowledge that Jones was a Klansman, his information was that the Congressman's father in the early 20's had introduced his son to others as "the youngest member of the Ku Klux Klan."

"I regret to make the even more serious charge that the evidence I have received . . . is that he was a member of an equally bigoted organization — anti-Catholic and anti-Jewish — namely, the Black Legion."

Jones sat quietly in the back of the hearing room listening to Pearson's testimony. When Chairman Owen Brewster (R., Me.) offered him time to prepare an answer, Jones said he was ready now.

"Unmitigated" Lies

As soon as he had taken his oath, he snapped:

"I brand these statements by Drew Pearson as unmitigated lies."

He said he had never been a member of the Klan and that his father, far from being a Klansman, actually was persecuted by its members because he refused to join.

"I was a foe of the Black Legion," he continued. "Nothing in my public or private life would ever recommend itself to my being a member in that type of organization."

Pearson conceded under questioning by Senator Homer E. Capehart (R., Ind.) that some of his information came from Francis Durbin, a Lima Democrat whom Capehart described as Jones' "political enemy."

Jones told the committee he knew nothing about the White House "switch-over" in which President Truman withdrew Wakefield's nomination for reappointment and substituted his name instead.

Pearson Suggests "Answer"

But Pearson had what he thought might be part of the answer.

He recalled, under prompting, by Brewster, that he reported in a recent column that Wakefield was dropped after he voted to reject a radio station application from Robert Bartley, a nephew of House Democratic Leader Sam Rayburn (Tex.).

"As much as I love Sam Rayburn," he said, "I think they (the two events) were associated."

He said Wakefield also voted against an application for a Cincinnati radio station which had been field by Leonrd Reinsch, the President's radio coach.

"But I don't know if that had anything to do with it or not," he mused.

ports unless the War, Navy, and Commerce Departments certified that such exports "will not prejudice nor impair the national defense nor the continuous non-restricted use of gasoline, diesel oil, bunker oil, lubricating oil or petroleum products by the American people."

In asking for the continuation of export-import controls, Chairman Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.) of the Senate Judiciary Committee said:

"There are ships on the West Coast ready to sail to Russia and if we haven't got export controls on Tuesday, those ships will sail."

Brewster said the Navy is preparing to buy 3,400,000 barrels of petroleum from the Persian Gulf area for defense needs. Brewster said the Navy is paying $1.05 a barrel for oil offered to the Navy in 1941 for 40 cents a barrel.

Demands Better Deal

Brewster said that since the United States, by virtue of the Truman doctrine, is protecting those oil reserves, it should receive a better deal from the Arabian-American Oil Co.

Wilson told the House group there is no indication that Russia is buying heavy shipments of oil from the United States to build up military stocks.

The bunker oil being purchased by Russia, he said, was of the type used by this country's Merchant Marine. The oil would not meet our Navy specifications, he said.

Representative Herbert C. Bonner (D., N. C.) inquired:

"All that oil could be used here?"

"Yes," Wilson replied.

"And could assist in avoiding rationing?" returned Bonner.

"Yes, in a general way," Wilson answered. "But the rationing in the Midwest which has been referred to has been due to transportation in part."

Pope Grants Private Talk To Eva Peron

Rome, June 27 (U.P.).—Senora Eva de Peron, the wife of Argentina's President, was received by Pope Pius XII today in a 27-minute private audience.

Three or 400 persons gathered outside the Argentine Embassy to watch her leave for the Vatican, but there was no repetition of a disturbance. Last night, when Communists and a crowd yelling, "Viva Franco" and "Vica fascism!" Got into a free-for-all in front of the embassy.

Police broke up the fight with their clubs and arrested 50 brawlers. Twenty-six of them were still held late today. Police Chief Cormine Bottino said they were Communists. He added that though no charges had been filed against them they were still held because "we have establishd that they deliberately tried to insult a guest of the Nation."

The Argentine Embassy informally asked an explanation of the trouble.

The Pope received Senora Peron in his library.

When the audience was over, the Vatican announced that "special mention was made (by the Pope) of the generosity of the Argentine nation with its illustrious President, of the help it intends to give for the benefit of the needy and of its work of assistance to the war-stricken countries of Europe, starting with Italy."

A jury convicted Gerson on October 11, 1946, of conspiring to reveal secret information to Russian agents. Today's ruling set aside the conviction.

the city income tax completely, and look to a sales tax for revenue.

Horan said the sales tax he wants for the District had been brought closer by the House vote, but conceded there was no way to write it into the revenue bill at once.

No Sales Tax This Year

Representative George J. Bates (R., Mass.) in charge of District revenue in the House, said "there will be no sales tax this year."

Representative Joseph P. O'Hara (R., Minn.) author of the Federal employe exemption plan, led the House drive to send the revenue bill back to confernce.

O'Hara denounced the Senate version of the income tax bill as "the foxiest little income tax gouging bill ever conceived at any time or in any place."

He pointed out that Congressmen and Federal officials appointed by the President were exempt from the income tax. "In simple equity it isn't right to our own efficient and loyal staffs to tax them and exempt ourselves," he said.

House District Chairman Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill.) teamed up with Bates and Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) to fight O'Hara's move.

They urged support for the income tax version that cleared the Senate. It applied the tax to all persons domiciled here—the only ones now taxed—and extended it to persons living here seven months or more in the year. These residents would have had to file returns, but they could have subtracted from the District tax the full amounts of income or intangible property taxes they had to pay to a State.

"I think this is a just bill," said Representative Smith. "It merely says to these people making their homes in Washington that "you ought to pay some tax somewhere."

"If you're unwilling to take an income tax, let's have a sales tax," said Smith.

He reminded the House it had voted down Horan's earlier bid for a sales tax, and said "how are you going to run the government here if you won't vote any taxes! You can't vote for all appropriations and against all taxes and balance the budget."

Dirksen told the House "strange things" would happen under O'Hara's plan. He gave these examples:

1. A Federal employe on the job here would be exempt, but the day he loses his job, he would become subject to the District income tax.

2. A Federal employe who drives a cab part-time here and has a legal domicile in a State could be taxed by the District neither on his Federal payment nor on the income from cab driving.

Representative O'Hara disputed this point.

Dirksen declared the O'Hara exemption was an invitation to tax evasion. He said the employes to be exempted from the income tax would pay two or three times as much "if we come to a sales tax."

Teaming with O'Hara were Representatives John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) Representative Thomas G. Abernethy (D., Miss.) and others.

Bates and Abernethy tangled briefly when the former protested that revenue would be cut by the O'Hara plan. "I don't care snapped Abernethy. "If you can't find the right way to do it, I don't want to do it at all."

2 Murderers, Rapist Die in Gas Chamber

Raleigh, N. C., June 27 (U.P.).—Three condemned men—two murderers and a rapist—were executed in the gas chamber of Central Prison today with the mournful spirituals of other "Death Row" inmates ringing in their ears.

Two of the men, Roy Kirksby, 25, and Moses Artis, 42, died together in parallel chairs. Woodrow Brown, 26, convicted of beating and raping a 59-year-old white woman, followed immediately.

Forbidden to Talk With Maid, Nurse Testifies in 'Slave' Trial

San Diego, Calif., June 27 (A.P.).—A former nurse in the Lynn., Mass., home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Wesley Ingalls testified today she was ordered to avoid conversation of any sort with Dora Jones, Negro maid the couple is charged with enslaving.

The prosecution witness, Mrs. Edna M. Phillips, graduate nurse, now of Marblehead, Mass., also testified at the Federal trial that "Dora did all the work—no one else."

Other witnesses—some of whom, like Mrs. Phillips, admitted "no great love" for Mrs. Ingalls or her husband—pictured Dora as doing all of the household and yard work.

Only Servant in Home

She shoveled snow in Lynn and in Boston, bareheaded and without gloves, witnesses said.

They described her, in the main, as inadequately dressed but one witness stated under defense questioning that in the evenings in Boston the Negress was neatly dressed and appeared to be happy.

She was the only servant at the time in the Ingalls' four and one half story (and basement) house on Beacon st., Frederick A. Stainforth, who owned an antique shop next door, testified.

Dora Jones, herself, whom the prosecution charges was held in slavery for years under threat of exposure of an alleged affair with Mrs. Ingalls' first husband, Walter Harmon, was still somewhere in "protective custody" of the FBI.

Appears Next Week

Deputy U. S. Attorney Eugene A. Tolin said—after the court announced there would be a recess until Tuesday following a night session tonight—that Dora would not appear until next week.

Defense Attorney Clifford Fitzgerald, who maintains that if the Negress was guarded from outside contact it was because of Mrs. Ingalls' fear she would expose the old affair with the first husband, last reported in Washington, D. C., questioned all witnesses closely about their feelings toward the Ingalls.

Mrs. Phillips and members of the Lewis' family, next-door-neighbors in Lynn, admitted that they had been involved in litigation with the former Massachusetts lawyer and his wife.

The Ingalls were cautioned at the start of today's session against interference with witnesses after their attorney apologized for remarks made to one yesterday by Mrs. Ingalls. Prosecutor Tolin then withdrew a motion to have the Ingalls confined.

U. S. Insincere On Marshall Plan, Reds Told

Moscow, June 27 (A.P.).—A Tass dispatch from Paris, commenting on remarks of Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, gave Russians the impression today the United States must be trying to back out of the Marshall offer of economic aid for Europe, now that Russia has agreed to talks.

"There is a supposition in some French circles," the official Soviet news agency said, "that Snyder's statement may be an amendment to Marshall's proposal—an amendment which actually would liquidate the plan."

The dispatch appeared in every Moscow newspaper and was broadcast on the Soviet home radio network. The Russian agencies have not yet reported President Truman's latest remarks on the Marshall proposal.

Interpretation Disavowed

There was a brief flurry among diplomatic officials in Washington Wednesday over Secretary Snyder's expressions at a news conference but the world subsequently received assurances of President Truman and others that the American Government was solidly behind Secretary of State Marshall's proposals for European self-help plus United States support "so far as practical."

(Snyder, questioned about details of the Marshall plan, said it was not an invitation to European nations to apply for relief, that "my interpretation is that he is asking them to make a self-inventory and see what they can do for themselves." Asked if there was not "an offer of United States assistance," the Secretary declared: "No more than we have had evidence of all along." Asked afterward if he disagreed with the assistance part of the Marshall plan, Synder issued a statement disavowing any split or disagreement "in any respect" with the Marshall program as outlined.)

Tass said Snyder's statement reflected skepticism over the giving of economic aid by the United States.

"Snyder declared Marshall had in mind only one thing—the urging of European countries to carry out an investigation of what they were able to do for themyselves," Tass said.

"His words have given some reason for some British and French papers to question the seriousness of Marshall's proposal and even to suggest that perhaps the plan does not exist at all."

Indonesians May Take Old Premier Back

Batavia, Java, June 27 (A.P.).—A swift reversal in Indonesian politics tonight apparently paved the way for reappointment of Sutan Sjahrir to the premiership from which he was ousted 19 hours earlier. But neutral informants said the shift would not halt the impatient Dutch from resorting to military action.

Sajap Kiri, the powerful left-wing popular front whose condemnation of Sjahrir's concessions to the Dutch resulted in his resignation, reversed itself completely and announced at Jogjakarta it would support Sjahrir's compromises and seek to reinstate him.

President Soekarno of the Indonesian Republic, acting as chief of an emergency presidential cabinet, delivered a formal reply to the Dutch. It accepted their demand that a Netherlands crown representative have final authority in an interim government, but was evasive on other points threatening a breakdown in Dutch-Indonesian negotiations.

This was the very concession for which Sjahrir was ousted. Soekarno, in making his statement, apparently had the backing of Sajap Kiri, whose six leftwing parties have a majority in both the Indonesian parliament and influential parliamentary working committee.

Sjahrir, however, never agreed in black and white to the principal remaining demand for establishment of a Dutch-Indonesian gendarmerie to maintain order. Another question which has gone unanswered was whether the crown representative would have veto power.

Keneipp Eyes D. C. Traffic From Blimp

Traffic Director George E. Keneipp took to the air in a blimp yesterday to "explore" the possibilities of using aerial photography in making traffic studies.

He was accompanied by Deputy Traffic Director Wallace L. Braun and Traffic Engineer John H. Mitton.

After hovering over the city's traffic lanes from 3 to 5 p. m., Braun announced the three had reached no definite conclusions about the value of aerial photography surveys.

"We'll have to look into all its phases," he declared, "and see if we can fit the aerial photography technique into our overall plan." mittee and the Goodyear Tire & The Inter-Industry Safety Com-Rubber Co. have offered to let the District use the blimp for aerial survey purposes, he revealed.

Chiang Buys 130 Million Rounds Here

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

The United States yesterday took two steps which looked at first glance like a renewal of the policy of military and financial help to Chiang Kai-shek's national government in China.

The first was a State Department announcement of the sale to China of 130 million rounds of surplus rifle ammunition, for approximately one tenth its original cost of more than six and a half billion dollars.

The second was an Export-Import Bank announcement that although the earmarking of 500 million dollars for China would lapse June 30, loan applications for specific projects would continue to be considered.

Little Comfort to China

Actually neither announcement brought much comfort to the hard-pressed Chinese government, which has been seeking large-scale assistance here ever since Secretary of State Marshall returned last January from his unsuccessful mission to China.

The surplus rifle ammunition was made in the United States between 1942 and 1944 to meet Chinese specifications. It was scheduled to be shipped to China under Lend-lease, but, the State Department explained, never was sent "because of insurmountable transportation difficulties."

When Secretary Marshall was in China, trying to stop the civil war and mediate between the two sides, a virtual embargo was put on the shipment of this ammunition. Now it has been released, partly because the United States can find no other use for it.

Useless to U. S. Army

It is a special caliber used by the Chinese, comparable to .30 caliber here, and according to the department's announcement "is not susceptible of use by the American Army." The ammunition is now stored in the West, and the Chinese government itself will have to arrange for its shipment to China.

The Export-Import Bank announcement was the first official confirmation of the fact that the 500-million-dollar credits, earmarked for China 18 months ago, would be thrown back into the bank's general fund on June 30.

In adding that the bank "is prepared to consider the extension of credits for specific projects in China," Board Chairman William McC. Martin, jr., was saying in effect, that China hereafter would have to compete with other applicants for a share of the bank's present uncommitted resources of 785 million dollars.

On Merits Only

Martin emphasized also that in considering any Chinese application the bank would make no loan that did not "offer reasonable assurance of repayment." Any future project-type loan to China, therefore, will be judged solely as an economic proposition.

In view of the continuing civil war and political financial chaos in China, officials here see little prospect that any loan to China could meet such standards under present conditions. It still is taken for granted in official Washington that China can expect no substantial economic help until it brings an end to its civil strife and puts its political house in order.

Chinese Ask U. N. Action On Two Ports

Nanking, China, June 27 (U.P.).—The People's Political Council, an official advisory body, has urged the Government to appeal the case of Darien and Port Arthur, both occupied by Chinese Communist troops, to the United Nations, a reliable source said today.

A resolution asking that the controversy over the important Manchurian ports be taken to the world peace organization was adopted after a four-hour tumultuous secret meeting. Police clashed with reporters who tried vainly to enter the council room.

Both Dairen and Port Arthur, occupied by Russian army troops during the Soviet union's short war with Japan, were to be turned over to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's national government, according to a Soviet-Chinese agreement, Darien was to be wholly Chinese, while Port Arthur was to be controlled jointly by Russia and China.

Chinese Reds Fall Back

Shanghai, June 27 (A.P.).—A government pincers threat forced the Communists to abandon the flaming ruins of Szepingkai in Manchuria today, but inconclusive fighting continued elsewhere and the war-sensitive Chinese government currency plunged steadily to new low levels.

Szepingkai, key railway junction 105 miles northeast of Mukden and 70 miles southwest of Changchun on the Mukden-Changchun arterial route, had been the scene of a savage battle for two weeks.

The Communists conquered most of it, but John Roderick, Associated Press correspondent in Mukden, reported today they set it afire and withdrew 12 miles to the west as government relief columns approached from Mukden and Changchun.

The official Chinese Central News Agency said the force from Changchun had recaptured Kungchuling, 25 miles northwest of Szepingkai, but other accounts said the Communists had sent reinforcements to that area and that new fighting was in progress or would begin soon.

In China proper, Communist attacks halted rail service southward from Peiping to Paoting, capital of Hopeh province. Top government commanders were reported attending a conference called by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek in Peiping.

This Is Iowa Where the Tall Corn Is Not Growing

FLOOD WATERS SURGE OVER FIELDS—Year after year this section of Iowa grew corn and hogs better than any other spot in the world, writes John W. Ball, roving Post reporter. Now it's under flood water from the Des Moines River, which broke the levee near Des Moines and spilled over the rich countryside. It was a model farm at Adel, just outside Des Moines, often visited by foreign delegations who wanted to see Iowa agriculture at its best. Several lives were lost and cattle, hogs, horses and chickens were sacrificed to the torrent. There'll be no tall corn here this year hope of the future for industrial peace will be shattered.

Murray Calls CIO Leaders

"The responsibility for industrial peace in the days to come is a responsibility which bears heavily upon employers. We will never permit the Taft-Hartley bill to become a shield for repression."

Krug's views on the Government's ability to deal with the wave of miners' protest walkouts and a possible long summer Nation-wide strike came as one high-ranking Interior Department Official voiced an opinion that the only way for Congress to solve the problem would be to enact a compulsory arbitration law applying only to Lewis' mine workers.

Latest Government figures showed that 213,503 members of Lewis' union were idle yesterday in a protest strike against the new labor reform law, and 1121 mines had shut down with a 24-hour loss in production of 1,287,275 tons.

The union's entire membership of 400,000 workers in 2500 mines will be idle officially today—the start of their 10-day vacation. When they return July 7, the UMW contract with the Government will have expired. It is then that Government officials believe they will resort to union tradition of "no contract, no work," and shut down soft coal production completely.

Although Lewis has kept quiet about the Taft-Hartley Act since Congress overrode President Truman's blistering veto of it, his headquarters has been assailing it from all directions.

The UMW Journal, the union's official publication, came out yesday with a call to members to face the new statute with "courage and action." And it accused the mine operators of making no efforts to resume contract talks which were broken off last month.

It commented editorially that the operators were "stalling wage negotiations hoping for legislative help."

Apparently in preparation for a test of the law's provisions dealing with political activities by unions, the UMW newspaper published the names of Senate and House members who voted to override Mr. Truman's veto. The act prohibits a union or corporation-financed publication from campaigning actively for or against any candidates in a Federal election.

CIO General Counsel Lee Pressman told reporters that these restrictions probably would be among the first to be tested in the courts. The CIO's 52-member executive board met here today to fix that organization's policy on the law.

The UMW Journal made no reply to Mr. Truman's statement Thursday that both unions and employers must go to work under the statute with "patience and moderation." But it commented that organized labor was being asked to accept the law "supinely," although business showed no such willingness to accept the original Wagner Act in 1935.

"For two years after Congress enacted the (Wagner) Act," it said, "the National Labor Relations Board was in a state of virtual paralysis and unable to function because of the bitter legal attacks on it by corporation lawyers. Every move by the board toward its enforcement was blocked by the Federal courts."

Columbians Forfeit Charter in Georgia

Atlanta, Ga., June 27 (U.P.).—The Columbians, Inc., founded here by a former Princetonian New Yorker, as self-appointed protector of white supremacy, lost its State charter today by default.

President Emory Burke and Secretary-Founder Homer Loomis, jr., failed to appear in Fulton Superior Court to answer charges by Attorney General Eugene Cook that the order violated its charter.

Railway Mediation Board To Intervene in Strike by July 8

The Railway Mediation Board announced yesterday it will intervene July 8 in an attempt to break the deadlocked wage negotiations between the Nation's railroads and 17 brotherhoods of nonoperating employes.

The panel's two members, Chairman Frank Douglass and Francis O'Neill, will conduct the mediation procedures in Chicago. Within a fortnight, they will know whether they can end the stalemate over the unions' demand for a 20-cent hourly pay increase.

If mediation fails, the board will propose arbitration and, if necessary, later will ask President Truman to name an emergency board to go into the dispute. Such procedure is provided by the Railway Labor Act.

Predicts Strike Spread

New York, June 27 (A.P.).—Charles A. Leone, regional director for the CIO Marine and Shipbuilding East Coast shipyard strike of 40,000 men would spread to the Gulf Coast by next Tuesday and involve approximately 120,000 union members.

No developments are in sight to halt the spread of the walkout over the weekend, Leone said.

Ten yards in Maryland, Massachusetts, New York and New Jersey, nine of them owned by the Bethlehem Steel Co., were shut down when the strike began early yesterday after a collapse of negotiations in a wage dispute.

The union sought a 13-cent hourly wage hike and other contract benefits but Bethlehem replied it could make no offer since ship-building costs already were so high that the American industry was seriously handicapped in competing with foreign yards.

Parley Held in Baltimore

Baltimore, June 27 (A.P.).—The Maryland Drydock Co. and union officials conferred today in hopes of averting a walkout Monday which would raise the number of striking shipyard workers here to 12,000.

Charles Russell, executive secretary of the union local, said 4000 members of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers (CIO) were scheduled to strike when their strike notice expires Monday midnight.

Meanwhile, 8000 members of the union's three locals at the Bethlehem Steel Co. yards here remained on strike.

Pickets patrolled before Bethlehem's three shipbuilding and repair plants, while peace talks were held in New York in an effort to end the tie-up of Bethlehem's East Coast yards.

Vote to End Strike

Oakland, Calif., June 27 (A.P.).—Striking AFL transit workers voted today to end their 17-day strike against the Key System transit lines.

A mass meeting of strikers representing the 3000 AFL operators and maintenance men voted 837 to 542 to accept the company's offer of an 11-cents-and-hour increase in the basic pay rate.

The management said it expected to have part-time service in effect by Sunday, with normal service in full operation by Monday of next week.

Use of Force Seen in Greece

Ambassador to Washington, told the Council the action of her northern neighbors was part of a plot to set up a "Communist dictatorship in Greece."

Prompt Denial by Albania

This was promptly denied by Col. Nesti Kerenxhi, Albanian representative, who declared "Albania has nothing to do with acts directed against another."

"Greece is the sole responsible party in these relations between our two countries," the Albanian representative asserted.

Bulgarian representative Nissin Nevorah also denied all charges and laid the blame on Greece. He said Bulgaria could not accept the proposal for a U. N. supervisory commission, since in his view this would violate the sovereignty of his country.

The statement of the Yugoslav representative will be heard next week, when debate is resumed.

Austin had declared that the evidence clearly bore out the Balkan Commission's findings that Yugoslavia, Albania and Bulgaria had been aiding guerilla fighters in northern Greece.

"They have in fact been committing the very kind of acts which the United Nations was designed to prevent, and have violated the most important of the basic principles upon which our organization was founded," he said.

He pointed out that Albania and Bulgaria were not members of the U. N., but said "this does not mean that they are not guilty of having used force in contradiction of the principles of the United Nations."

Floods Raging in Four States Of Mississippi River Valley

St. Louis, June 27 (A.P.).—Destructive floods on the Mississippi River and its rampant tributaries continued unabated today, causing new and widespread damage in a four-State area.

The American Red Cross revised upward to 33,657 its estimate of the number of persons homeless in Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri and Illinois.

Parts of several Central Missouri communities, including the State capital of Jefferson City, were partly flooded as the Missouri River surged to record levels. The river spread to a width of two miles there.

Missouri's agriculture commissioner said the floods had cost Missouri at least 50 million dollars in crop losses alone. The Missouri Highway Department reported more than 50 northern Missouri highways closed, bridge damage piling up and said that the total damage would be "enormous—probably the worst we've ever had."

The north central Missouri town of Boonville reported its endangered water system pump house was still operating despite a further rise in the Missouri River, which already had inundated part of the town.

South of St. Louis the Mississippi spilled over two levees between St. Louis and Chester, Ill., flooding an additional 20,000 to 40,000 acres of farmland. The people had moved out.

Nearly 1000 soldiers from Scott Field and Fort Sheridan, Ill., joined auxiliary Coast Guardsmen and civilian volunteers in a fight to save other threatened barriers. Most of them were working on the Degognia-Fountain Bluff levees 30 miles south of Chester in an effort to prevent flooding of a 29,000-acre district.

The Coast Guard estimated 4000 persons had moved out of riverfront homes in the St. Louis area.

The Iowa communities of Red Rock and Eddyville on the Des Moines were flooded for the third time this month.

At Ottumwa, one third of whose 32,000 residents had to leave their homes when flood waters passed the 20-foot mark June 7 and 15, preparations were made for a predicted stage of 17.5 feet tomorrow afternoon.

prepared in advance, this was undoubtedly one of the first tasks of the group. From previous meetings between Bidault and Bevin, it was likely that they would explain as much as they knew about Marshall's proposal and then put forward the French suggestion that international commissions be formed to determine how much aid would be needed beyond intra-European exchanges.

While today's meeting was going on the American's remained apart. There were no American observers on hand during the talks and the idea that the Europeans get together to work out their needs without American intervention was being carried out to the letter. It had been expected that Will Clayton, Undersecretary of State for Economic Affairs, who has been conferring in London, would come to Paris during the conference. It was indicated today, however, that he not come to Paris but would go directly to Geneva for the meeting of the Economic Commission for Europe.

Senate Approves U. S. Participation In Refugee Work

The Senate completed legislative action yesterday on a resolution approving American participation in the international refugee organization.

Under terms of the measure which now goes to the White House, the United States will contribute a maximum of $73,500,000 or about 45 per cent of the total estimated needed to care for Europe's homeless.

Sharp Rise in Food Cost Shown in Year

Meat Prices Lead Advance; Increase In Pork Seen Due to Rising Corn Market

Prices on many foods and some household items have risen sharply since the end of price controls a year ago, a survey showed yesterday.

Meat prices led the advance in recent months, with increases of more than 50 per cent in some sections of the Nation, a poll of representative cities showed. A few items cost less today than they did a year ago.

The price of pork in butcher shops may take another rise next fall because of current soaring prices of corn futures. Farmers are sending pigs to market now, rather than feed them $2-a-bushel corn. This probably will mean a decrease in livestock shipments in the fall, when pork prices normally go down.

Corn Futures Slow

The corn futures market at the Chicago Board of Trade was slow yesterday, the first session in four days that corn for delivery in July has not hit an all-time high. July corn hit a top of $2.03½ per bushel Thursday, but closed yesterday at $1.99½-$1.99¾.

Shell eggs for delivery in October rose to an all-time high of 52.15 cents per dozen on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, breaking the previous record of 51¾ cents set in September, 1920. Other egg futures hit new 27-year highs for the third time this week.

Price controls ended last June 30 after President Truman vetoed a control bill which he said would be ineffectual. The office of Price Administration was revived 25 days later after Congress passed a set of weaker controls. The President abolished all price controls on meat October 15.

New York reported that pork loin was selling for 63 cents a pound, 60 per cent higher than last year. In the farm region of the middle West pork loins were up from 49 per cent at Minneapolis to 113 per cent at Pierre, S. Dak.

Butter Price Rises

Butter also was considerably more expensive in the middle West. At Madison, Wis., the price was 74 cents a pound, a rise of 50 per cent and at Omaha, Neb., it had risen 41 per cent since last June 30. Butter was 12 cents cheaper, however, at San Francisco.

Prices were also higher on durable items in many cities.

Washing machine prices rose $20 at Portland, Ore., and $40 at Milwaukee. Electric stoves jumped $19 at New York to $90 at Indianapolis.

Clothing prices seem to have remained steady. Nylon hosiery was selling generally at about ceiling prices of a year ago and there was no standing in line for hours in order to get them.

Pamphlets Hit at U. S.

Vienna, June 27 (U.P.).—Vice Chancellor Adolf Schaerf told a Socialist Party rally today that planes of one of the occupation powers showered Vienna and the Soviet zone with pamphlets denouncing the Austrian government as a puppet of the United States.

He said he could think of "only one occupation power which would make available their air force for such a purpose." Government ministers customarily do not mention Russia in making accusations.

The pamphlets fluttered down from the sky yesterday. They bore the seal of the Austrian Communist Party and the name of the party printing house. Soviet sources disclaimed knowledge of the pamphlets or the planes.

One pamphlet said, "American puppets stay on; hunger government stays on."

They pictured a fat Uncle Sam in a tuxedo, holding in his arms Chancellor Leopold Figl, Interior Minister Oskar Telmer, and Foreign Minister Karl Gruber and Schaerf.

The leaflets demanded new elections on which the Communist insist.

Board Vacancy Filled

Richmond, Va., June 27 (A.P.).—Governor Tuck today appointed Joseph P. Harpine, mayor of Broadway, Shenandoah County, to the State Highway Commission to fill the unexpired term of the late Kenneth N. Gilpin of Boyce, who died last week. The term will run to June 30, 1948.

Harpine will represent the Staunton district.

30 Silver Spring Landlords Are Granted Rent Increases

Approximately 30 landlords in the Silver Spring, Md., area have been granted rent increases on "hardship" basis, it was announced yesterday.

Tenants were not given an opportunity to protest the rent hikes, a spokesman for the Silver Spring Rent Control Administrator's Office said, because income and expense figures submitted by the landlords "must be treated as confidential."

In each case, the spokesman said, the records of the landlords were checked carefully by accountants and "no guesswork was done."

"Not a single complaint has been received from a tenant because of the increases allowed," he said.

Among the tenants affected by the recent increases allowed are renters of 41 units in the Spring Knolls Apartment House in Silver Spring. They were scheduled to receive the notices yesterday.

Federal Court suits against two Montgomery County landlords for alleged violation of rent ceilings have been filed by Housing Expediter Frank R. Creedon, it was revealed yesterday.

The two landlords are L. H. and Margaret Terrell of Bethesda for a $1200 treble damage claim, and Lyford C. Berge of Silver Spring for $252.

North American Co. To Sell Unit's Stock

New York, June 27 (A.P.).—The North American Co., said today it proposes to sell its remaining 133,383 shares of common stock of the Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co., as a further step in compliance with the Public Utility Holding Company Act.

The company said it has asked the Securities and Exchange Commission to authorize an invitation for bids for purchase of the stock up to July 8.

Disposal of the Cleveland company, formerly one of North American's principal subsidiaries, was started several weeks ago when more than 96 per cent of an offering of 1,714,525 shares of Cleveland Electric was purchased through exercise of stockholders' warrants.

Furnishings Sold

Shepherdstown, W. Va., June 27.—Property in a house which has been closed for 35 years was auctioned off at nearby Sharpsburg, Md., June 12. The owner, who had inherited the property from her parents, refused to live in the house. After her death last winter, arrangements were made to sell the property to settle the estate.

U. S. Exports for May Hit All-Time High

The gap between heavy United States exports and smaller imports—a matter of world-wide concern—widened still further in May, the Census Bureau reported yesterday.

Commercial shipments to other countries—which means everything except lend-lease and UNRRA's relief shipments—hit an all-time high of $1,391,600,000 in May, increasing $159,100,000 over April.

At the same time, imports dropped by $38,200,000 to a May total of $473,600,000.

That meant difference of 918 million dollars—for a single month—between what other countries owe the United States for goods and what the goods they sell to the United States will pay for.

Officials here and in other countries have voiced increasing concern over how foreign nations can continue to make up that gap, since they are fast using up both their reserves and the billions of dollars in credits this country has provided.

The situation has prompted the President's National Advisory Council on Foreign Financing to declare that foreign countries require more aid.

Ex-GIs Shock London, Scale Palace Wall

By Ed Creagh

London, June 27 (AP).—Two grinning former GI's from Oregon, out to see the world before "we have to start playing at being grown up," threw a chill into Scotland Yard and the British War Office today by scaling the wall and spending the night in the beautiful—but utterly exclusive—grounds of Buckingham Palace.

This simply is not done. In fact there is an 8½-foot wall around the palace grounds, with long, sharp spikes on top of it, and patrolling that wall are the pick of London's bobbies and a smart detail of army guardsmen.

In the words of one embarrassed Scotland Yard official, "It never happened before"—until Wallace (Steve) McCall, 22, of Portland, Oreg., and John L. Jensen, 24, of North Bend, Oreg., good-looking 6-footers both, found themselves in London last night without a place to sleep.

"Well, there is Buckingham Palace," said Jensen.

"If they were home, I am sure they would invite us in," said McCall.

But since they weren't——

It took half an hour, but with the aid of two passing English girls who acted as scouts, they managed it over the wall, barely evading four cops.

They selected a secluded spot, and curled up happily in their Arctic sleeping bags at the edge of the lawn where some of the world's most fashionable tea parties are held.

They awakened once and split a can of beans—"not too good without ketchup," said Jensen—but otherwise slept soundly until 8 a. m., when the sun was high and trouble arrived in the form of gardeners, palace employes, uniformed policemen and an apoplectic plainclothesman.

"They treated us very swell, once they were convinced there were no bombs in our sleping bags, until the black maria arrived," related Jensen. "Then I asked Steve if he would drive or should I. They didn't seem to know we were kidding."

"They even escorted us to the bus stop," said McCall, a Yale graduate student.

High officials in charge of keeping uninvited persons away from the royal family were profoundly annoyed, however. Some London newspapers said there might be an official inquiry into security arrangements at the palace.

The two young Marco Polos said they were on their way to Europe for a motorcycle tour.

Granary Has Blaze

Charles Town, W. Va., June 27.—Two fire companies were called to "Hill Farm" Thursday to control a fire which broke out in a granary. Spontaneous combustion in newly mixed hay and feed was believed to have caused the blaze.

Wood Paving Blocks Explode As Record Storm Hits London

London, June 27 (U.P.).—The worst thunderstorm in 21 years struck London today with 60-mile-an-hour winds and torrential rain.

The wooden paving blocks outside Buckingham Palace were so thoroughly soaked that dozens of them exploded with roars like small bombs. One automobile passing the palace was blown a few feet into the air by the exploding pavement.

Rain was driven through the open high windows of the chamber of the House of Commons. Although they were hastily closed when the rain started, the wind drove the water in around their frames, which were sprung in the blitz.

Bright red leather benches were soaked and water poured down staircases into the dining rooms and bars of Commons.

The government's Ministers hastily left the dripping front benches and Laborite Henry Hynd, sitting near the windows, asked: "can umbrellas be provided for members on this side?"

The wind blew a tree across a Nissen hut in a squatters' camp near Maidstone, Kent, killing an electrician, his wife and their two-year-old son.

When the rain and wind stopped, the sun came out brightly and the temperature went to the high 80s again.

Europe had its hottest day of the year. It was 100 degrees in Brussels and Paris.

Allies Request Hunt for Nazi, Swedes Say

Stockholm, June 27 (U.P.).—The newspaper Aftonbladet said today that Allied authorities have asked Swedish police to search southern Sweden for Martin Bormann, the Nazi war criminal who has an unkept date with the Allied hangman—if he is still alive.

Bormann's reported death was never proved and the No. 1 Nazi under Hitler was sentenced to hang in absentia by the war crimes tribunal at Nuernberg.

The only police comment on Aftonbladet's story was, "it is unlikely that Bormann is living in Sweden because his face is familiar to everybody."

J. J. McCloy Joins Johns Hopkins U. Board of Trustees

Baltimore, June 27 (AP).—John J. McCloy, president of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, has accepted an invitation to become a member of the Johns Hopkins University board of trustees, the university announced today.

Dr. Isaiah Bowman, president of the institution, said McCloy's "international and practical experience will be of exceptional value to the university and its student body."

McCloy, a noted international lawyer and Assistant Secretary of War from 1941 to 1945, assumed the presidency of the International Bank on March 17 of this year.

A native of Philadelphia, he is married and the father of two children.

Tank Battalion Plans Canceled by Va. Guard

Richmond, Va., June 27 (AP).—Plans for organizing the 182d Tank Battalion in the Danville-Martinsville area have been canceled by the National Guard bureau because the weight of the medium tanks with which the units would have trained was adjudged too great for Virginia bridges.

contempt—a felony which carries a maximum sentence of two years and $10,000 fine.

This was the first count of the two-count indictment against Barsky, head of the committee's executvie board, and the others. The jury was instructed by Keech to render a "no guilty" verdict on this count because, Keech said, there had not been sufficient evidence presented by the Government.

In his closing remarks to the jury, Prosecutor Charles Murray reminded it that questions as to the constitutionality of the House committee were extraneous. "The issue at stake is simply this—did these defendants refuse to turn over subpena records?"

Rogge emphasized the allegation that the defendants did not have control of the records.

"Suppose they had asked Helen Bryan to release the records to them and she refused, would they then be guilty or not guilty?" he asked.

The Anti-Fascist Committee has described itself as a relief organization whose main aim had been to aid refugees from Franco Spain.

indicted on 11 counts took the sentence stolidly.

He gave reporters copies of a statement which said in part:

"Nazis convicted of giving false information to American authorities in Germany receive sentences of 10 days in jail or no sentence at all.

"Without exaggeration I say that if this verdict stands the police state has made its first appearance in our country."

Ford said he would file with the Court of Appeals motions to set aside the conviction and for the setting of bond in the interim.

it favored a foreign power rather than this country.

In ruling, Justice Pine said, "It is more important in my opinion to preserve for all persons all the time their constitutional safeguards than for the Government to proceed in this case."

Costello then went back before the grand jury. No further questions were asked him and he was excused.

over the Nation, including Washington, is sponsored by the National Research Council on funds provided by the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

Richest source of information in the preliminary studies, Gordon said, has been the experiences of pilots. Interviews with the pilots furnish investigators with incidents pilots have experienced and the skills with which they have handled these situations.

Results of the study will not be used to evaluate presently employed airline pilots.

Radar Demonstrated

By The Associated Press

James M. Landis, chairman of the President's special board of air safety inquiry, said yesterday he is "intensely interested" after a flight demonstration of a radar collision warning device developed by Howard Hughes.

Landis, who also is chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board, and the other members of the special committee, were shown the 15-pound radar unit on a flight in a Trans World Airline Constellation over the rough terrain of Virginia. About 25 members of Congress were taken up on demonstration flights.

Landis told reporters that the instrument merited further investigation, but that he was not ready on the basis of an initial demonstration to say whether the warning system is the answer to some types of air accidents, such as the ramming of a Virginia mountain by a Capital Airlines plane on June 13.

The President's committee is expected to make its first report next week.

The warning device, known as the Hughes Airline Radar, was developed from a wartime instrument used in the tail of Navy fighters to warn the pilot of the approach of an enemy plane.

the trial for bias and prejudice.

Miss King did not reply to the charge.

As to Eisler, he spoke at length on "reasons why I should not be sentenced."

The small pudgy German nervously fingered a sheaf of papers and spoke in a heavy gutteral accent.

He said he wanted only to return to his native Germany or to "a real and honest sanctuary for anti-Fascist exiles, to Mexico."

"I shall go to prison with my head high. My conscience is clear, I have done what had to be done. I could not capitulate before reaction and waive my democratic and legal rights. I could not allow myself to be intimidated by those who have no respect for the Bill of Rights and are, to quote Henry A. Wallace, "a source of shame to decent Americans.' I had enough and I had to object. And for this, your honor, I do not deserve to be sent to prison."

Eisler, who told the court he was "victim of a witch-hunting hysteria in this country, held his head to one side and moved his jaw back and forward as Justice Holtzoff delivered a presentence statement.

To him, Justice Holtzoff said:

"In determining what sentence to impose, the court considers whether the defendant relaizes the gravity and importance of the offense, whether he has a contrite and reprentant attitude and whether he is willing to repair the damage.

"The defendant has shown and continues to show an attitude of defiance. He is not contrite and shows no willingness to cooperate with Congress. Indeed, even now he shows he is contemptuous of a committee of Congress. He does not respect the institutions of this Government."

For 50 minutes, Justice Holtzoff had listened to Eisler's attorneys give reasons they said made it necessary for Eisler to have a new trial. Repeatedly, Justice Holtzoff told them to hurry, told them he had heard enough.

Then he denied their request. In answer to their charge that he was "discourteous, intemperant, impatient and partial . . . and hostile to the defendant" and counsel, Justice Holtzoff said:

"Confine yourself to the law, and not to the court's judicial ethics. The court is a better judge of that."

He then accused Miss King of untruths in her affidavit.

"The assertion that while I was connected with the Department of Justice I was assigned to the FBI is untrue. Likewise it is untrue that my duties were concerned with investigations into the activities of aliens and Communists. It is likewise untrue that I participated in determining the policy, nature, scope or objects of these investigations."

On June 11, the United States Court of Appeals here disqualified Justice Holtzoff in the Barsky trial on the basis of a "bias and preudice" petition. Justice Holtzoff himself said that decision was not a precedent for the Eisler ease.

"To hold that no matter how fantastic or how false the assertions in the affidavits to the petition may be, that they must be true, may lead to converting affidavits of bias and prejudice into dangerous instrumentalities in the hands of unscrupulous lawyers, for thwarting the ends of justice or delaying its administration."

Eugene Dennis Freed On Bond Pending Plea

Eugene Dennis, executive secretary of the American Communist Party, today was free on $10,000 bond pending motion for a new trial on charges of contempt of Congress.

Dennis was convicted Thursday by a District Court jury, which had deliberated more than five hours. His attorney, Louis McCabe, said the new trial motion would be argued sometime after July 4. Charges against Dennis grew out of his failure to appear before the House Committee on Un-American Activities as subpenaed.

May Defense Called Coincidental

By The Associated Press

The Government contended yesterday that former Congressman Andrew J. May's explanation of wartime dealings with the Garsson munitions combine contains "too many coincidences to believe."

Ellis J. Arenson, assistant prosecutor, told the Federal Court jury trying May and Henry and Murray Garsson on bribe conspiracy charges that the three defendants should be convicted.

Arenson started the final arguments which are expected to continue until the middle of next week when the case is due to go to the jury.

The 72-year-old May, wartime chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee, is accused of taking more than $50,000 in bribes from the Garsson brothers for obtaining Government favors for the Garsson combine.

Senate Passes Succession Bill

dent's own arguments to account in urging passage. Each attempted amendment was defeated by a solid Republican majority, augmented by scattered Democratic votes.

Senator Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.) sought to substitute the President Pro Tempore of the Senate for the Speaker as White House heir. He was defeated 55 to 31 after Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), the present President pro tempore, took the floor against his amendment.

"This is an impersonal issue," said Vandenberg. "It is not a popularity contest."

Other amendments rejected:

1. A substitute bill by Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) to call together the electoral college whenever the Vice President's office was vacated. Defeated voice vote.

2. By Senator John L. McClellan (D., Ark.) to postpone the effective date to January 20, 1949, to avert a political change in White House occupancy. Defeated 50 to 36.

3. By Senator Theodore F. Green (R., R. I.) to send the bill back to committee with instructions to recommend the same joint committee study proposed last year. Defeated voice vote.

4. By Senator Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.) to provide that the highest ranking Army or Navy officers on active duty would step in if an atom bomb wiped out the entire prior line of succession. Defeated voice vote.

Senate Unlikely To Be Given Radio Regulation Bill

Senator White (R., Me.), author of a controversial bill applying to radio, suggested yesterday that the Senate Commerce Committee not try to report it to the Senate this session.

White, chairman of the committee, issued a statement announcing the close of hearings on the measure.

Press of other business, plus the fact that the hearings ran longer than expected, prompted his suggestion, he said.

Fulton Lewis, Jr., a radio news commentator, opposed a provision that newscasters give the source of their news. Lewis suggested instead that every news broadcaster be required to keep on public fil an up-to-date list of all his sources of income, his organizations, clubs, jobs, etc., so that the public may know exactly the nature of his background and his experience and what his influences are and where his financial backing comes from, and who he is."

Lewis and Senator Taylor (D., Idaho) indorsed a provision which would free radio stations of possible libel suits in political campaign broadcasts.

The Progressive Citizens of America filed a statement protesting a provision which would limit use of radio waves in election campaigns to "legally qualified" candidates or "a regularly organized political party."

Club Women Vote To Admit Refugees

Change in Position Comes After Plea by Former Foe of Stratton Bill

By Genevieve Reynolds
Post Reporter

New York, June 27.—Mrs. Robert P. Patterson, wife of the Secretary of War, urged American women "to insist on universal military training now."

She spoke at the closing session of the General Federation of Women's Clubs' fifty-sixth annual conclave.

Delegates adopted resolutions indorsing Secretary of State Marshall's plan for European reconstruction, the Compton report advocating universal training and the Stratton bill to admit 300,000 displaced persons to the United States within the next four years.

Support of the Stratton bill reversed the delegates' stand taken Wednesday when they cast an overwhelmingly negative vote on the issue. The motion was reopened by Mrs. J. Gus Liebenow of Berwyn, Ill., leader in the fight against the measure Wednesday.

Opponent Changes Mind

Mrs. Liebenow said that while she still opposed opening America's doors to thousands of refugees, sleepless night and worrying had convinced her that a revote on the displaced persons resolution should be made possible. "I felt that my opposition did not have sufficient opportunity to have its full democratic say before the first balloting."

The Illinois mother said that she had had four sons serving overseas in the armed forces during the war and that she personally would like to help displaced persons. "But the housing situation is so terrible," she averred "I do not think they should be brought in until our own people have decent places to live."

Two District of Columbia women—Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, and Mrs. Hugh Butler—spoke in favor of the measure on displaced persons.

Mrs. Patterson Speaks

In an appeal to delegates to support universal military training, Mrs. Patterson said, "Training must be sufficiently long enough to prepare the boys adequately for their responsibilities, or it is just pretense which does not impress anyone overseas and which lulls us to a false sense of security."

She told the audience, "when you hear an eloquent fellow traveler condemn military training in the United States, remember he never mentions the universal military training now going on in Russia, which lasts from two to five years."

Mrs. J. L. Blair Buck of Richmond, newly elected president of the Federation, tonight pledged all her energy toward leading the clubs in a program that will help bring peace to the peoples of the world. She said that she hoped to accomplish this through close cooperation with the organized forces in this conutry that are striving for international cooperation and rehabilitation plus better citizenship training in ideals, privileges and responsibilities of living under a democratic form of government.

House Passes Bill To Create 12-Man Efficiency Board

By The Associated Press

The House has passed unanimously a bill to create a 12-member commission to investigate all agencies of the Government with a view to promoting "economy, efficiency and improved service."

The Senate already has passed an almost identical bill.

The legislation, by Representative Brown (R., Ohio) says the commission shall go about its work in accordance with a congressional policy of:

Limiting expenditures to the lowest amount consistent with efficient performance of essential services.

Abolishing unnecessary activities and consolidating similar ones.

Eliminating duplication of functions.

Defining and limiting the work Federal agencies do.

Six of the 12 commission members would be from private life, with an even division of Republicans and Democrats among the 12.

It would be required to report back to the next Congress, which would be after the 1948 election.

Swedish Capitalist Plans to Live in Mexico

Mexico City, June 27 (AP).—Axel Wenner-Gren, Swedish capitalist on the U. S. blacklist during the war, says he intends to "make my home in Mexico and to concentrate my interests here."

During a talk last night with officials and social workers, to further a campaign for undernourished children, Wenner-Gren said he is impressed by President Miguel Aleman's plans to invest heavily here. He mentioned exports of furniture and manufactured silver as two fields that attract him.

GOP Leaders Weigh New Tax Cut Bill

Senate Republican leaders last night weighed the possible political effects of passing a tenth-inning tax reduction bill following a series of inconclusive conferences.

Senate GOP Steersman Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) told newsmen frankly that political considerations were among the many factors delaying a definite decision.

"Strangely, Democrats are doing all the urging now," Taft smiled. "We're the ones being coy. We're perfectly willing to wait until next year."

The Senate majority policy committee, headed by Taft, meanwhile, directed Senate Finance Chairman Eugene D. Millikin (R., Colo.) to make a thorough canvass of the possibility of overriding another veto, if Congress votes to cut taxes starting January 1.

Other Developments

There were these other developments:

1. Ways and Means Chairman Harold Knutson (R., Minn.), following a strategy huddle with Republican Ways and Means committeemen, predicted the House would pass his second bill if assured in advance of 63 "pledged" Senate votes.

2. A tally privately made by Senator Harry Flood Byrd (D., Va.) was reported to show 61 "sure" Senate votes for a January 1 tax cut, and some half a dozen more who might support such a cut.

Millikin told reporters only that he thought there is a "fighting chance."

The possibility of another GOP try at tax reduction before Congress adjourns was projected last week when Knutson reintroduced his vetoed bill, cutting income taxes 10½ to 30 per cent. He merely changed the effective date from July 1, 1947, to January 1, 1948.

Byrd Backs Bill

Byrd subsequently announced he would support the bill with the date change providing Republicans make good their pledge to set an over-all spending ceiling.

An independent canvass turned up about four other Democratic Senators who may vote for a next January cut, even over a veto. Besides Byrd, these were said to include Senators Walter F. George (Ga.), Edwin C. Johnson (Colo.), Millard E. Tydings (Md.) and A. Willis Robertson (Va.).

Normally they would constitute more than enough switches to override a veto. If the full Senate membership votes, however (which is rarely the case), the two thirds overriding quota would be 63.

The suugested shift in tax strategy was fully aired at a luncheon in the Senate secretary's office, attended by Senate GOP steersmen. Taft said no final conclusions will be reached until Republican leaders of both houses meet jointly next week to program bills for the remainder of the session.

Time Is Short

He noted, however, that Congress is to adjourn July 26, and the revised tax cut would have to clear Congress by the weekend of July 12. Otherwise the President might kill the bill by a pocket veto.

In another quarter it was said that Republicans were at odds over what the political effect of a delayed action tax bill would be. Some thought the presidential veto of the last one, and the House vote to sustain "leaves the Democrats in a hole." They were planning to make campaign use of the veto. Others thought the better part of political wisdom would to make good the GOP pledge to cut taxes this session if in anyway possible. On one thing most were agreed. Another attempt to cut taxes would hurt only Republicans, if they failed to override a second veto.

Another of the delaying considerations was the crowded session's end agenda. Not one of the 12 departmental appropriations bill has yet reached the White House. Taft told newsmen a special "continuing resolution" will have to be passed next week at latest so departments can meet payrolls and other expenses pending a break in the money bill log-jam.

Industrial Sugar Quotas Raised

The Sugar Rationing Administration yesterday raised sugar allowances for industrial users by 10 per cent for the July-September period.

SRA increased the sugar base from 75 to 85 per cent so that industrial users for the next three months will be entitled to 85 per cent of the sugar they were using in 1941.

Only industrial users, including candy and soft drink manufacturers, remain under rationing.

89 FBI School Graduates Told Of Citizenship Training Need

Eighty-nine graduates of the FBI National Academy were told yesterday that "the mere enactment of new laws or the amendment of old laws is no substitute for proper education and training in good citizenship."

Senator Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.), speaking at graduation exercises in the Departmental Auditorium, said "our greatest need in the problem of crime is character education in the home, spiritual education in the church, and civic education in the school."

He urged the graduates to be "models of American mhanhood."

"Every youth in our land looks to the policeman on the beat," the Senator said.

Among the graduates was Detective Thomas E. Woods of 2701 Farm rd., Alexandria, a member of the Alexandria police force since 1938.

T. Vincent Quinn, nominated last April by President Truman to the post of Assistant Attorney General in charge of the criminal division, presented the diplomas.

Other speakers were Joseph D. Nunan, jr., retiring commissioner of Internal Revenue, and Howard O. Hunter of the Indianapolis, Ind., police force, president of the graduating class. FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover introduced the speakers and Hugh H. Clegg, assistant director, presided. The class was the thirty-fifth to graduate from the academy's 12-week course.

Democratic Front Plea Voiced by Chilean President

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, June 27 (AP).—President Gabriel Gonzalez Videla of Chile, here on an official visit, told a news conference today that an international democratic front, "An International Democrata" should be organized to fight for democratic ideals.

He said he favored standardization of armaments for the Western Hemisphere.

The Chilean President said he favored a single army for the Western Hemisphere to be "commanded by a staff command composed of elements of all the armed forces of America each with equal rights regardless of the strength of its arms or the number of its men."

Prominent Milwaukee Pastor Is Held Guilty Of Setting Fire to His Own Church Building

Milwaukee, June 27 (AP).—A Presbyterian clergyman, gaunt Dr. John Lewis, whom the prosecution charged wanted a "bigger and better" church than the 77-year-old red brick edifice in which he preached for 12 years, was convicted today of setting it afire last January.

Dr. Lewis

The 73-year-old pastor lost color and sagged in his chair as the municipal court jury brought in the verdict convicting him of arson in the $150,000 blaze. The offense carries a possible sentence of from one to 10 years.

The clergyman who has been on leave of absence since the fire, was remanded to jail to await a hearing tomorrow on his attorney's motion for a new trial.

The State based its case on the pastor's admission that he had purchased two quarts of kerosene at two different filling stations two days before the fire. The prosecution introduced in evidence rags soaked with kerosene which firemen testified they found entwined in the railing of the stairway leading to the organ loft.

Dr. Lewis testified he bought kerosene and a synthetic fluid to clean suits which he said smelled of smoke from a minor blaze in the church January 8.

Budapest, Hungary, June 27 (AP).—The Hungarian Parliament unanimously ratified the peace treaty today. Only Russian ratification now is needed before Hungary again becomes a sovereign state.

Head-Boiling of Americans Laid to Japanese

Guam, June 27 (AP).—A prosecution witness testified today that he saw Japanese naval surgeons boil the severed heads of four American war prisoners in order to preserve the skulls as specimens.

Testifying before a naval commission trying 19 Japanese for the slaughter of eight unidentified Americans in a series of fiendish "medical experiments" on Truk in January, 1944, Surgeon L. T. Shigioshi Nakamura said he did not know what eventually became of the four skulls.

American investigators have hunted them vainly in Japan, where they are believed to have been sent.

These four, Nakamura said, were cut from the bodies of two men who died of excessive application of tourniquets and two who were strangled in a "mercy killing" after they had survived tourniquet tests and dynamite explosions which blew off their feet.

The four other Americans died of bacterial injections.

Nakamura said they were dissected but not beheaded, and the remains were dumped on the hillside behind the Truk naval hospital. There they were casually covered by dirt from a new air raid shelter, but he testified that later they were dug up and thrown into the sea to hide the crimes.

Arms Arguments

It is said by way of extenuating the arms business with Latin America provided for in the inter-American military cooperation bill that this involves merely an exchange of new arms for old. The statement is the premise for the argument that the existing military balance within the Americas would not be affected. All other things being equal, the argument is sound, but they are not equal. Even if this were a mere matter of exchange, the military balance would be changed, because the countries do not have arms of equal age or out-of-dateness for exchange. Moreover, a mere exchange would involve a money transaction. Say that country A has an old Curtiss Jenny for exchange for a P-80. The P-80 requires far more servicing, equipment, ground crew and gasoline than a Jenny, and this extra cost, extended over the entire paraphernalia of modern military equipment, would run into money which only half a dozen of the Latin-American governments could afford. Thus the ability on the part of the rich to buy would further distort the military balance. But the premise of the argument requires correction as well. Plain fact is that the buyers under the new arms bill could buy as well as exchange. This is stated in Section 3 (d) which gives authority "to transfer, provide for the use of, dispose of, or to facilitate the sale of, to such countries any arms, ammunition, or implements of war." Selling, of course, is envisaged as well as exchanging.

It would take the wisdom of Solomon to maintain the existing military balance within the Americas. And we have yet to see any such wisdom in the Pentagon. But who are we to have control over the balance, anyway? We conclude that the whole thing is dangerous from beginning to end, and we should rue the day that we inaugurated this arms traffic, set up our military missions as the dominant element in our representation to Latin-American countries, and elevated the status of Latin-American military staffs as the dominant element in those countries. Our approach to Latin America should be maintained as an effort to promote a continental community (with, eventually, a police force) instead of a military alliance pivoted on United States control of Latin-American arms and military establishments.

Exit Mr. Punch

The island of Britain is still apparently in a convulsion of social reforms and the latest example is an order by the Middlesex County Council prohibiting any further exhibitions of the famous Punch and Judy shows which have been the delight of nearly ten generations of English children. The objection to Mr. Punch is substantially the one which from time to time has been raised over here to Mother Goose, the stories of the Brothers Grimm, comic strips and gangster movies, namely, that he tends to glorify or glamourize violence and cruelty.

Superficially, a case might be made to support this view. The Oxford Companion to English Literature describes the traditional scenario of the Punch and Judy drama as follows:

> Punch is a hump-backed, long-nosed creature, dissipated, violent and cunning. In a fit of anger he kills his child. His wife, Judy, discovering the murder, attacks him with a bludgeon, but he wrests the weapon from her and kills her. The dog Toby seizes him by the nose and he kills it. He is visited by a doctor when ill, kicks him and when the doctor retaliates, bludgeons him to death. He beguiles the hangman into putting his own head into the noose and promptly hangs him. Finally, he is visited by the devil whom he likewise vanquishes.

Thus it seems obvious that Mr. Punch is not the sort of character who should be held up to British youth as an object for emulation. Still, the question is really whether a taste for make-believe violence engenders the desire of actual violence. If so, then it seems to us that the Middlesex County Council should also have prohibited the performance of Shakespearean tragedies, in which it is customary to carpet the stage with corpses, and even the dramas of Aeschylus and Sophocles. Probably the truth, however, is that most of us, including children, have a certain measure of violence and cruelty in us that a Punch and Judy show, like a heavyweight boxing match, affords a convenient and socially sanitary way of getting rid of it—katharsis, you know.

Anyway, all efforts to bowdlerize the Punch and Judy melodrama have been met with protests from the spectators. In a letter to the Times of London a Punch and Judy showman named J. H. Bond tells how he once attempted to introduce a mild note of retribution into the story. "At the conclusion of my show," he wrote, "Mr. Punch used to be made to sit in an armchair asleep and Death came up and carried him down to the agonized shrieks of the children, 'Wake up, Mr. Punch, wake up!' The children were so dismayed at this end to Punch's career of brutality that I had to alter the last curtain to make Evil Triumphant. The children cheer this happy ending and go away smiling, but I have yet to learn that any of them promptly turn to beating their baby sisters."

Loyalty Bill

The stated purpose of the proposed Federal Employes Loyalty Act of 1947 is unexceptionable. Introduced by Representative Rees and favorably reported by the House Civil Service Committee, it aims, like the President's loyalty executive order, to prevent employment by the Federal Government of persons disloyal to the United States. It is more sweeping than the executive order and therefore much more expensive—needlessly so, we think—and it sets up a review procedure outside the executive agencies constitutionally responsible for hiring and firing and outside the Civil Service Commission responsible for administration of the merit system—a serious procedural defect in our judgment. Despite the laudability of its aim, moreover, its effect, we believe, would be merely to drive from Government service men and women of independence, initiative and ability.

The Rees bill would require checking the names of all Federal employes and job applicants against the files of the FBI, the Civil Service Commission, military and naval intelligence and the House Committee on Un-American Activities. Any concerning whom "derogatory information" is developed would then be subject to "a full field-loyalty investigation" by the FBI. Now, the Committee on Un-American Activities seems to us a mistaken and misleading place to seek "derogatory information." The committee provides this kind of information so freely as to make it altogether meaningless. Its chairman, Representative Thomas, boasted the other day that his files contained a million names. Some of these—according to Mr. Thomas, about 100,000—are the names of active Communists. The rest may be the names of men guilty of nothing more derogatory than attendance at a mass meeting addressed by Henry Wallace or than disagreement with the views of Mr. Thomas or Mr. Rankin or former Representative Martin Dies who first gave the committee its reputation for blunderbuss derogation. The committee has shown so little regard for fundamental American freedoms that inclusion in its roster of a million is more likely to be praiseworthy than derogatory.

The Rees bill, like the President's order, would establish as an indication of disloyalty "membership in, affiliation with, or sympathetic association with" any group designated subversive by the Attorney General—a dangerous standard in our estimation. At least, however, it would require publication of the Attorney General's list. There is a wondrous circularity of thought involved here. Groups are called subversive because subversives become members; and then all members are called subversive merely on account of membership. It has been through the zealous pursuit of this fallacy that Mr. Thomas has achieved his million names.

This procedure for the indictment of employes and applicants would be less serious if there were more adequate provision for their trial. Persons deemed disloyal as a result of a preliminary finding may appeal to a review board which will give them "a factual statement upon which such finding is based, not disclosing, except when in the discretion of the board the interest of justice so requires, the source or sources of the information." We can think of no situation in which the interest of justice would not require this disclosure. In the absence of it, the right of appeal is a mere illusion. How can an accused person refute an accusation without an opportunity to confront his accuser—without even knowledge of the accuser's identity? How can misunderstanding or malice be exposed under such a handicap?

In our opinion, the finding of the loyalty review board should itself be subject, in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act, to review by a Circuit Court of the United States. This would be possible, of course, only if a full record of the review board's proceedings, including all the evidence for and against the accused, were available. It is idle to argue that disloyalty is not a crime. It is worse than a crime; and anyone convicted of disloyalty by a Government board is subject to a penalty of the utmost severity—a stigma ruinous to his whole future. Surely he deserves at least the protection accorded a man charged with pocket-picking or burglary. We think there can be no subversion more dangerous than overthrow of the traditional safeguards which Anglo-American law, through long experience, has erected to protect the innocent and to guarantee full justice.

Voice In Wilderness

The piteous spectacle of starving Greeks deludedly sending food parcels to this country should make congressional opponents of the Voice of America review their position. The confusion would be funny if it were not such stark tragedy. Here we are, starting in to rescue Greece, and the objects of our benefactions are contributing their pittances to combat an imaginary food shortage in this country—trumped up, it is said, by Communist propaganda. Could there be any clearer indication of the crying need for a vigorous foreign information program to tell the truth about America far and wide? Anyone who doubts that people listen, even behind the iron curtain, need only look at Moscow, where the labored humor of a "comedy" at the expense of the Voice of America is advertising the program to all and sundry.

Protest Strikes

There is an absence of convincing evidence that current labor disturbances are in the nature of political demonstrations designed to discredit the Taft-Hartley labor law and put pressure on Congress to modify it. Certainly there does not appear to be any causal connection between the shipyard strikes and the passage of the Labor Act. And it has been almost a foregone conclusion that the return of the coal mines to their private owners would result in another walkout of the miners in the absence of a contract. Hence, although some miners assert that they quit work before the scheduled date for the start of their 10-day paid vacation in protest against the labor law, it is highly probable that they would have acted in much the same way if the President's veto had been sustained.

The disturbances in the coal fields, indeed, call attention to the limitations of the new labor legislation, which, as its sponsors frankly admit, does not safeguard the public from the paralyzing effects of a cessation of coal mining. There is nothing to prevent the miners from idling for nearly two months until the provisions of the Labor Act become effective, if they are unable in the meantime to reach an agreement with the operators. Thereafter the provisions of the law for dealing with strikes that imperil the national health or safety would merely set up machinery for the purpose of assisting a settlement and provide for issuance of temporary injunctions against strikes for a period of approximately 2½ months. Then the injunction would be vacated, even if a settlement had not been reached.

Senator Taft stated on the floor of the Senate last Monday that he thought our freedom depended upon maintaining the right to strike. In the last analysis, therefore, if a coal strike or any other strike endangers national health and safety, "the Government will," as he admits, "have to act through some special emergency legislation for that particular case, as was done in connection with the general strike in England." Consequently, if the coal miners prove intransigent, the chances are that they will eventually be subjected to more repressive forms of legislation than the prohibitions and restrictions embodied in the Taft-Hartley Act.

The noncooperative, domineering attitude of some labor leaders has already alarmed many legislators concerned for the future of representative government and undoubtedly was responsible in large measure for the overwhelming vote in favor of the Labor Act. In the course of the debate preceding the Senate vote to override the President's veto of the labor bill Senator George said: "In my opinion, this is the final test of whether Government is to function or whether minority groups, highly organized, are to dictate the type of legislation that we shall have. If there were no other reason for passage of this legislation, I should assuredly support it." We believe his views are shared by many Americans within as well as outside the organized labor movement. Labor leaders cannot afford to ignore the warning implicit in the Senator's remarks by calling or prolonging strikes for the purpose of putting political pressure on Congress.

Fight For Housing

Something like the concerted demand voiced here this week by the 35 national organizations which have joined in a "fight for housing" campaign was needed to jog Congress out of the torpor, or worse, into which it has fallen in respect of the desperate national housing problem. It is toward enactment of the Taft-Wagner-Ellender housing bill that these organizations have pointed their appeal. William Green of the AFL, one of the participating groups, said that from the point of view of "millions of American families in dire need of homes at a price they can afford" this bill is "must" legislation. The wonder is that it has not been so regarded by the Republican leader who has the honor of being one of its authors.

This bill, absurdly stigmatized by real estate interests as "socialistic," is primarily a bill to promote new construction through private enterprise. It proposes to use the financial strength of the Federal Government to aid and encourage private builders, through established and tested underwriting techniques, to construct over a 10-year period the homes this country urgently needs. The rent control law just enacted by Congress gave ample evidence of the real estate lobby's strength. Now it remains to be seen whether Congress is in a mood to heed a voice far more broadly based. The 35 organizations which yesterday observed "Fight for Housing Day" in Washington and other communities are speaking for the people of the United States. They speak with a justified indignation no national legislature can afford to ignore.

BEATING UP THE CHANNEL

With twilight, shy waves mutter, faint winds ring
Like bronze, an odor grows, of cinnabar,
Of sandal. Hands must rub my eyes, then cling;
I stamp the bridge, and marvel that no star
Breaks forth in heaven, while around me gold
Flares out; I see the glinting oars, the sail
Of Tyrian purple, next to her a bold,
Low Viking, crimson shields and silver mail;
A galleon heels, to dip her smoking tiers;
The little ships yet harry her; now fair
Upon the night, a flag, with Yankee cheers,
And Paul Jones passes in the cannon-glare.
I fret my eyes. The great hull under me
Glides northward through a tranquil, desert sea.

War Service Appointees

Recently, comment has appeared in The Post and elsewhere regarding war service appointees who are being separated in the current reduction of force. While it is understandable that these employes should object to losing their positions, it is difficult to justify the belief of some that they are being done a gross injustice or that they should be retained in preference to permanent status employes.

War service appointments were made with the definite understanding that "Such appointments generally will be for the duration of the war and in no case will extend more than six months beyond the end of the war." The implied understanding in the case of permanent appointments was that the duration of employment would be such as to permit making Government service a career subject to satisfactory job performance. There is no reason to believe that war service employes are superior to or even as good as permanent personnel, since there were no open competitive examinations to eliminate the incompetents, and since the war service appointments were made during the greatest labor shortage in history. No doubt many capable persons left responsible, high paying positions in private industry to accept war service appointments in order to help the war effort, but the majority of these have long since returned to their positions.

Further, in support of the career service Federalites' right to retain their employment, it should be remembered that most of them entered Federal service after waiting months or years for the desired Civil Service examination to be announced. After satisfactory completion of the probationary period they secured permanent status. Most permanent employes entered Federal service at a time when salaries and ratings were low, while the war service employes did not become interested in Federal employment until high rated positions in war agencies became available.

In view of the above facts it does not appear possible to make a very strong case for retaining war service personnel in preference to permanent status personnel except, possibly in the case of certain veterans, or in individual cases of exceptional merit.

Harmful Liberals

As the crisis deepens and the issues sharpen, the confusing and ultimately harmful role of the sincere liberal becomes clearer to any realistic observer.

The recent national and international tour of one of the sincerest and most likable exponents of American liberalism offers an excellent case in point. He has been forthright in putting his finger on the evils and dangers inherent in the domestic and foreign policies of the present Administration and eloquent in appealing for action to correct those evils and ward off those dangers.

But, when it came to a specific program for action, his suggestions had no substance. In practice they boiled down to further international conferences foredoomed to failure and renewed fruitless protests against foreordained domestic policies. There was nothing one could really get one's teeth into.

The reason for this is the typical inability or reluctance of the liberal to recognize that we are living under an economic system which must inevitably lead to recurrent periods of business stagnation and, as between nations, to almost continuous warfare. It is his failure to grasp or admit this (because it puts his own social and economic pattern of life in jeopardy) which makes the liberal a definite menace to society. His fuzzy thinking befuddles the thousands who are attracted by his altruism and moved by his eloquence. He serves as a sentimental will-o'-the-wisp, leading his followers only deeper into the quagmire of reform.

It were better for the world if the well-meaning liberal, with his deluding palliatives, would withdraw from the scene, even line up with the conservatives (in whose camp he will usually be found anyhow when a real crisis develops). If the liberal's nostrums were not available, earnest seekers after a real remedy might find one.

Children's Hospital

I have sent my light company refund coupon to The Post for Children's Hospital. I am visiting in South Carolina, so my sister sent it to me.

As a mother whose child was in Children's, I can tell you that there is no worthier cause. My little girl went into the hospital, and while we knew there was no hope at all, I can never forget the tenderness and care she had, nor the sweet-faced nurse who wrapped her carefully in a baby blanket after she died and carried her downstairs.

We can never do enough for Children's Hospital. I am sure there must be thousands of others who feel the same as I do. I hope you go "over the top."

Labor Law

Representative Fred J. Hartley, House author of the marvelous new medicine guaranteed to stop industrial conflict, now finds John L. Lewis "rebellious and mutinous" when it fails to work and threatens still tougher legislation. (How about giving the people their money back, Congressman?)

Congress passed his legislative cure-all despite the President's veto and his message calling it unworkable—and 100,000 miners go fishing.

This will never do. Half-measures such as this legislation won't do the trick. May I therefore suggest for the Congressman's convenience a nifty little law such as was written some 400 years ago and was part of the Poor Laws of that period?

It reads as follows:

"If anyone refuses to work he shall be condemned as a slave to the person who has denounced him as an idler. The master shall feed his slave on bread and water. He has the right to force him to do any work no matter how disgusting, with whip and chains . . . if the slaves attempt anything against the master they are to be executed. Justices of the peace are to hunt the rascals down . . . if it happens that a vagabond has been idling for about three days, he is to be branded with a redhot iron with the letter V."

If the American worker continues to fish after this remedy is applied it will be necessary for the new congressional majority leaders "with a mandate from the people," as the next step in putting down rebellions and mutinies, to discover how Hitler and Mussolini made trains run on time.

This is a simple program guaranteed to work.

Greek Aid Inaugural

The agreement on economic aid to Greece signed in Athens by Foreign Minister Constantine Tsaldaris and Ambassador MacVeagh inaugurated a new era in the relations between the United States and the Hellenes. It also constituted a landmark in American foreign policy, newly embarked on a system of world-wide aid to halt Soviet aggression.

The 12-article agreement embodies the hopes and aspirations of the Greek people for self-determination and independence. At the same time it gives the United States the satisfaction of supervising the 300 million dollars of aid to be expended by the American mission for aid to Greece in implementing the Truman doctrine.

Noteworthy among the features of the agreement is the provision for "full and continuous publicity" consistent with security on the operation of the program. This provision is in marked contrast to the secrecy behind the iron curtain, where Russian-inspired assassination, expulsion of political opposition and cover-up have been the order of the day. However, the interests of national security of embattled Greece, at the front lines against Russian aggression, demand a certain amount of caution against Soviet spying and infiltration.

Fulfillment of the agreement is dependent on the speed with which the American mission, headed by former Gov. Dwight Griswold of Nebraska, can understand the problems of Greece, ravaged by war as no other nation has been. This challenge involves the American advisers putting themselves, so to speak, "in the shoes" of the Greek people, seeing problems through their eyes, in the light of their history and their national character. This is in contrast to the approach that has been urged by certain American "do-gooders" who have preconceived notions about how to handle the Greek situation, including pet ideas about foisting their own peculiar brand of radical political and economical system on Greece, which the American people have even rejected for themselves and which would be doubly unworkable in Greece.

The Greek aid agreement coincides, fortunately, with the opening steps for implementing the monumental Harvard University speech made by Secretary of State George C. Marshall, in which he urged comprehensive economic aid to Europe, rather than a piecemeal approach.

Crucial in Secretary Marshall's program is economic self-help by the respective nations. This condition has already been fulfilled by the Greek people to the best of their capacity. An important difference, however, exists between a land such as Greece and a land such as Belgium. The latter country is cooperating with the Netherlands and Luxembourg, its immediate neighbors, for collective self-help by economic cooperation.

No such possibility is available in Greece, encircled as it is by Soviet-dominated satellites, Albania, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, which are bent on establishing a Balkan federation whose principal aim is the subjugation of Greece. Economic cooperation in the Russian-controlled Balkans is a very different matter than economic assistance in the Low Countries.

Too much cannot be expected too soon from the work of the American mission on aid to Greece. While there is high hope for its effectiveness, it should not be assumed that by some magic stroke the mission, through its present limited funds, can completely restore the Hellenic nation. The economic problems of Greece are so numerous, the health conditions so grave, the political situation so delicate that patience, persistence and understanding are necessary on the part of all who would befriend Greece.

New Horizons For Workers

By Malvina Lindsay

Chance To Learn

FOR DECADES the Government has been spending money to develop better informed and more productive farmers. Now it is being asked to start similar extension education for men and women who work in factories and offices.

In a Congress that is pinching pennies the bill of Senators Elbert D. Thomas and Wayne Morse to establish a labor extension service for the Department of Labor might seem a hopeless gesture. But it, like aid to farmers, promises a return on the investment. Better-informed workers would increase productivity. They would, also—since ignorance breeds belligerence—do more in the long run to bring about industrial peace than all the labor laws Congress could devise.

Even greater aims are involved. A bridge would be started across one of the most dangerous gulfs that divides the American people, that between those who never had a "chance to learn" and those who did. And millions of adults, who in the next few years must make world-shaking decisions at the polls, would be given a short cut in understanding to the problems of the day.

THE HUNGER of American workers for more learning is general and deep-seated, those engaged in labor education have found. Now that industrial workers are coming up against greater responsibilities in their unions, being drawn into more activity in the social and political projects of their communities, they are especially eager to improve themselves.

They flock to the classes, forums, institutes and summer schools opened to them by voluntary efforts. Between 50 and 75 colleges and universities offer such courses. But these can reach only a fraction of the millions who want to attend, and whose unions are willing to pay for sending them. Also, the demand for teachers and lecturers at union halls is far greater than can be met.

What is needed for the country's 42 million industrial and office workers is an extension program similar to that which the Department of Agriculture provides for six million farm families through extension workers, county agents and its money grants to States willing to match a part of the funds. The labor extension service bill provides for grants-in-aid to States to start such a program.

WORKERS who come to the summer schools are a professor's dream. They do not have to be prodded to study, nor do they doze in class. Their excitement over knowledge is contagious. A girl at the Hudson Shore Labor School—a year-round project that grew out of the Bryn Mawr summer labor school—reported she had written her father a long letter telling what she had learned about the sun's moving. "Now," she said, "he's written me back five pages of questions."

The Hudson Shore School—across the river from Hyde Park—has pioneered in developing courses and methods for labor education. It has found that workers want to understand labor relations, economics and government, but that they also want English and science, and are especially eager to find creative outlets in the arts. A class in which men and women long frustrated by their educational lack suddenly discover they can paint, sculpture, write poetry, otherwise express their creative yearnings is a deeply moving experience for both pupils and teacher.

Responsible labor leaders are looking to the labor education movement to stabilize unions and to prevent wildcat strikes. As more workers understand labor problems, also the operations of unions and methods of negotiations, they will act more advisedly, it is believed.

Women workers are eager for the education that will enable them to take more active part in unions—in many of which they are still kept on back seats—and also to advance in their factories, where their chief progress has been to that of shop stewards.

Finland's Spirit

Among all the nations to whom the United States has at one time or another extended financial assistance, there is one country that stands out with singular distinction, Finland. In contrast to the many beneficiaries of American loans who have pleaded for and received cancellation of all or part of their indebtedness, the small republic of Finland has year after year without fail met her obligations. On June 15 the Finnish Minister in Washington once more transmitted to us the instalment due in payment of the Finnish debt.

In these times when budgets are figured in billions, the Finnish debt payments may seem insignificant. To those who know that they are made possible only by the unceasing labor and sacrifices of the Finnish people who, at the same time, must pay to Soviet Russia a staggering indemnity as the price for peace in a war of self-defense, the faithfulness of the Finns to fulfill their obligations is a proof of the indomitable spirit of this small democracy of the North. The American loan was established between two friendly nations to help the development of Finland's economy. The debt to Soviet Russia was imposed on Finland as a tribute by the victorious aggressor.

When the fate of Finland is being considered in the councils of the world it should be remembered that the Finnish people stand in the front rank among democratic nations. The Finns have certainly the right to live their lives without foreign interference.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

How Can It Be Done?

AS THE European governments work on the idea broached by Secretary Marshall in his Harvard speech, and as the three committees set up here by the President begin their inquiries, it may be useful to define—if we can—the practical criterion by which the whole effort is likely in the end to be judged.

Lippmann

In Europe the universal questions are: What does the United States Government expect us to do to justify our right to assistance, and will Congress and the American people provide that assistance when the President and the Secretary of State recommend it?

Here, the question is how much can the United States afford to provide, and also will Congress and the people approve the official estimates of what could and should be provided?

THE BEST answer to these questions is to say that what we expect of the European governments is an agreed program of rehabilitation which is, as respects the American grants-in-aid, self-liquidating over a definite and reasonably short term of years.

Thus it will not be enough for them to add up their prospective dollar deficits for the coming year, and present that to us as a statement of their needs. For the Administration and Congress are bound to reply that covering the European deficit for 1948 is not good enough if it means that the same deficit will have to be covered again in 1949, and in 1950, and so on endlessly. The hallmark of a satisfactory plan is one which shows how by the judicious use of American grants-in-aid in 1948, the deficit will be smaller in 1949, still smaller in 1950, and overcome entirely at some date thereafter.

The European program must, in other words, be one in which the American subsidy is applied to the improvement of European production and trade in such a way as to do away with the need for American subsidies. Such a program will not be a dole but an investment of working capital that makes Europe self-supporting and solvent.

IF SUCH a program can be formulated and agreed to, the other questions can be answered with confidence. There is no real doubt whatsoever that the United States can afford to underwrite the diminishing deficits of such a liquidating program. The total cost, the total drain upon our resources each year, would not be so much as the cost and drain of the last war each month. But what, on the other hand, the United States cannot afford is to become engaged in paying out even relatively small sums endlessly and without hope of finishing with it, to help our friends and allies live at a subsistence level.

We can afford all that it will take to make them self-supporting if they have united to help themselves. But spiritually and politically we cannot afford to dole out charity to each of them separately. The atmosphere of the world will be poisoned if great and proud peoples were made to feel that they are to subsist on American charity.

IF THE KIND of program which meets these general criteria is worked out, and if it has been approved after rigorous examination by American technicians, industrialists, and financial experts, there is no need to be afraid of the final decision of Congress. The Congress will have to be shown that the program is genuine, that the estimates are conservative, that the calculations are reliable.

But if the plan is sound enough to work, it will be convincing enough to be approved by that great majority of the people and of their representatives in both parties who want more than they want any other thing from public life—a peace which proves that this war was not fought in vain and that it does not have to be fought all over again.

Washington Calling

The Roosevelt Myth

ON JULY 26, one month away, the Library of Congress will make public the papers of Abraham Lincoln that were preserved by his family. When Robert Todd Lincoln, son of the Civil War President, deposited the papers with the library in 1919, he left them under his personal seal.

Childs

In his will he provided that they were to be indexed and classified, but were not to be opened to the public until 1947. Robert Todd Lincoln died 21 years ago. It has been 82 years since the assassination of Abraham Lincoln.

Elliott Roosevelt in 1946, one year after his father's death, published a book in which he gave verbatim conversations of the late President Roosevelt, including his judgments on public figures still living. I greatly fear that this contrast in reticence does not reflect any too well on the state of political morality in our time.

Now comes James A. Farley with his memoirs, currently being serialized in Collier's. If it is possible, Farley goes even further than Elliott Roosevelt. He quotes private conversations of persons still living concerning the judgments they passed on persons now dead. The most conspicuous example of this is when he quotes Mrs. Roosevelt as having said that her husband was never at ease with those who were not his social equals.

THIS IS very sad. Jim Farley has always held himself with great pride. While he muttered in private about his grievances—and they were real grievances—he did not ask for sympathy in public.

As the story comes out in the magazine, it doesn't sound like the Farley most of us knew down here. It has a quality of now-I'm-going-to-tell-teacher that is at variance with the character of the genial, able, shrewd politician who was such a useful friend to FDR.

Following what seems to be the accepted custom of our time, Farley delegated most of the writing of the book—to Walter Trohan of the Washington bureau of the Chicago Tribune. With his customary frankness, he confirmed this to me when I asked him about the rumor current here.

Farley said that naturally he did not have the writing skill to put a book together and so he called on his friend Trohan. He pointed out that his previous book, Behind the Ballots, had been written by Edward Roddan, formerly with the Democratic National Committee.

The current magazine articles, Farley emphasized, are excerpts from a book. When the whole book is published, he believes it will be clear that he has done justice to FDR, for whom he professes the highest admiration. While that may be true, what has come out so far certainly sounds more like the Chicago Tribune than anything else.

ALL THE ENTRIES in the I-knew-him-when sweepstakes are by no means in. Harold L. Ickes has an extensive story to tell out of a vast accumulation of diaries. So does Henry Morgenthau, jr. The late Harry L. Hopkins' story is being prepared by Robert Sherwood. There is a law of diminishing returns in these matters. It seems likely that, as we leave the Roosevelt era behind and become absorbed in sweeping new events, the topical interest in the period that began in 1933 will dwindle.

ANYONE seeking a model would do well to turn to Frances Perkins' "The Roosevelt I Knew." This offers no sensational "secrets," yet it gives a fascinating picture of the man, with the shadows as well as the highlights. It has been a best-seller for a long time.

What we are witnessing in the aftermath of Roosevelt's death is a process of myth-making on a titanic scale. Roosevelt the symbol is towering over Roosevelt the man, with all his human weaknesses, foibles, vanities, virtues and greatnesses.

It is a kind of folk myth which is fed by Roosevelt's own acute sense of history and his place in it. Nearly 2000 persons a day visited the Roosevelt home at Hyde Park last month, and the number is constantly increasing.

Nothing that is written or said from here on out will exert very much influence on the myth-making process. The haters, the bitter blasphemers, the scorners, will chip away at the base of the myth in vain. In vain will the idolaters offer their further incense. The corrections will of necessity be left to the historians of 50 to 100 years from now, and even they may not catch up with the core of truth.

Cloudy Future

By Barnet Nover

Two Years After San Francisco

PREMIER Paul-Henri Spaak of Belgium, first President of the United Nations General Assembly, injected a note of astringent realism in the broadcast commemorating the second anniversary of the signing of the San Francisco Charter.

NOVER

Some of the other speakers—the list included the heads of four of the five great powers — swallowed hard and came up with words of optimism and cheer regarding the past record, the present state and the future possibilities of the new world organization.

Spaak withheld judgment. "Why attempt," he asked, "to hide the disillusions which these two years have brought us?"

THE DISILLUSIONMENT is, to a large extent, the product of factors operating outside the U. N. However, it is also the product of a widely prevalent misconception about the real nature of the organization.

As was evident to those who, like the writer, were present at San Francisco while the Charter was being drawn up, the United Nations is not, and given its present powers, cannot be a system of collective security.

To be sure, the Charter speaks bravely and eloquently of the determination of the "peoples of the United Nations" to "save succeeding generations from the scourge of war, which twice in our lifetime has brought untold sorrow to mankind."

This great aim is proclaimed at the very outset of the preamble. The fact remains, however, that the maintenance of peace can only be the indirect rather than the direct result of the U. N.'s labors.

This circumstance is the product of the fact that the United Nations can only enforce its will on an aggressor nation if the Big Five — the United States, Russia, Britain, France and China — are one in their determination to prevent aggression.

When such agreement exists, no action by the U. N. is necessary. No nation would dare flout the collective will of the great powers.

On the other hand, the absence of agreement among the Big Five is enough to inhibit the U. N. from serving as a restraining force or from taking steps to punish an aggressor.

THE POINT certainly need not be labored at this time that what we have had, inside and outside the U. N. since the San Francisco conference met, has not been great power harmony but great power disharmony.

Agreements among the Big Five have been few and far between. Disagreements have been frequent, rancorous and acute.

The result has been that only in one instance has the United Nations succeeded in living up to the great faith placed in it. In the case of Iran's complaint to the Security Council regarding the conduct of Russia, the fact that the spotlight of world opinion was focused on Soviet activities undoubtedly had a restraining effect on Moscow. It would be naive to assume, however, that Russia withdrew her troops from Iran merely because the latter's complaint was being considered by the Council.

On the other hand, there have been not one but many instances in which the great principles and the great objectives voiced in the Charter have been flouted.

EVEN WHILE the Security Council is considering the report of the Balkan Border Commission which investigated Greek complaints against its northern neighbors, violations of the Greek border by Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Albania are still going on.

Moreover, Russia can exercise its veto power to prevent the Council even from denouncing the violators.

The preamble of the Charter reaffirms "faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person."

Events that have been taking place east of the Stettin-Trieste line that marks the western border of the Soviet sphere are a mockery of that affirmation.

The Charter also bespeaks the determination of the United Nations members to "establish conditions under which justice and respect for the obligations arising from treaties and other sources of international law can be maintained."

What has happened to the Yalta and Potsdam agreements is, to say the least, wholly at variance with that aim.

THIS DOES not mean that the United Nations must be written off as a noble experiment that has gone sour. That, despite justified disillusionment with its record thus far, is simply not true.

President Truman was entirely right when he declared that the realization of the objectives of the United Nations is a "continuing task" and "is not easy."

Habits of cooperation, the unquestioned acceptance of rules of law, are developments that cannot occur overnight.

The grim paradox is that the United Nations will survive and prosper if there is a long period of peace. In and of itself it cannot bring peace into being, nor can it maintain it. That task, under the Charter and by the very nature of existing international society, rests with the great powers, which means, to a very great extent, that it rests on us.

Greece's System of Taxation Complicated and Inequable

By M. W. Fodor

(Post reporter, authority on the Balkans and the Near East, author of "South of Hitler," "Plot and Counterplot in Central Europe," and other works).

Athens, June 27.—Taxation in Europe was always complicated, often crooked and unsatisfactory from the point of view of an American or Englishman. The Greek taxation system is, however, probably the most complicated. It enables fancy contortionist experiments — reduction of the tax of "good boys," increases for the "bad ones." Though the Greek tax system is based on the French system, it is even more involved than its Gallic counterpart.

For the budget of 1946, for example, the total revenue was calculated to amount to 141 million dollars. Of this amount, direct taxation yielded 34 million dollars—nobody could tell me how much of these direct taxes was income tax, for the direct taxes include, among other items, (a) tax on net income, (b) tax on presumed income, (c) tax on gross income, to which latter category belong taxes from animal breeding, acreage, inheritances, gifts and dowries (the Greek still gives a dowry to the daughter at the time of marriage), tax on real estate, etc.

Taxes on Rents

The indirect taxes include taxation on rents or building revenues, on leased lands, on dividends or commercial enterprises, on profits on merchant shipping (the latter clause is evaded by the registration of new Greek ships under the Panamanian flag), and a host of taxes on consumer goods. The indirect taxes amounted to 67 million dollars in last year's budget. Then there are receipts from monopolies, such as salt, gasoline and kerosene for lighting purposes (the gas of the rich for motor cars is untaxed), and stamp duties and other extraordinary revenues.

One of the headaches of the serious tax authorities is the low income tax, which is usually just 1 per cent in lower brackets, while for higher earnings it is from 8 to 19 per cent. One of the chief complaints of the Left is that the collaborators are escaping, under the present regime, the super war tax, which starts at 30 per cent and rises to 90 per cent.

Collection Difficult

This is the voice of an authoritative government source:

"The collection of this tax meets exceptional difficulties. Many who profited during the German occupation have lost their money; others converted it to gold and bonds. Despite the severe measures suggested (imprisonment, deportation, confiscation of visible property) they hope the measures taken against them will become more lenient . . . The budget estimate for this tax amounted to 50 billion drachmae; only (with the necessary readjustment) 11 billions were collected."

In face of this unjust, complicated and often partisan taxation system the report of the Porter Mission recommended a revision of the taxes which would eliminate (1) unproductive taxes and would simplify the tax structure, (2) reallocate the sources of revenue between national and local authorities.

The income tax enforcement, according to the Porter Report, should be improved by compulsory registration of all commercial enterprises and a substantial increase in penalties for tax violations. Further, there should be an upward revision of the income tax at least 50 per cent on the tax assessments on professional occupations and commercial enterprises. Also, importers should be prevented from retaining excessive profits arising from divergencies in internal and external prices. Porter also recommended the abolition of the present restrictive taxes on transportation of freights.

Ford Grants 1st Pension Plan In History of Auto Industry

Detroit, June 27 (AP).—The Ford Motor Co., which pioneered the check-off system of dues collection in the automobile industry, today became the first car manufacturer to agree to an old-age retirement plan for its production workers.

Nearing the end of almost two months of contract negotiations the Ford management and the CIO United Automobile Workers Union announced agreement had been reached for the setting up of a pension program and a straight 7 cents an hour wage increase for some 110,000 production workers.

Richard T. Leonard, UAM-CIO Ford director, asserted the pension plan will cost the Ford company 100 million dollars the first year, and 15 million dollars for each year thereafter. The first year estimate covers the cost of the company's assumed liability for past service of UAW workers on the payroll.

Details in Doubt

Management spokesmen made no comment on the probable cost of the plan.

Yet to be worked out are specific details of the program, what if any contribution the workers will make to it once it has been established, and the effective date of its operation. One UAW-CIO officer said the scale of retirement payments probably would range between 50 and 60 per cent of the worker's average annual earnings during his employment.

The wage increase will be retroactive to May 31, 1947, the date on which the old contract expired.

In addition to the straight 7 cents an hour wage increase, agreement also was announced under which an additional 5 cents an hour increase will be given to 10,000 maintenance employes and to core makers and jobbing moulders.

Amounts to 15 Cents

Leonard declared that the 7-cent wage increase plus the benefits of the pension plan in effect amounted to an increase of more than 15 cents an hour. General Motors and Chrysler Corp. previously had agreed with the UAW-CIO upon an "equivalent" increase of 15 cents an hour, 11½ cents of which was in the form of direct wage advances and the remainder in the form of six paid holidays annually.

A joint statement issued by Leonard and John F. Bugas, Ford vice president in charge of industrial relations, said:

"With the wage increase the average hourly pay of Ford employes will be approximately 3 cents an hour more than those of major competitors."

With the 7-cent increase the Ford average hourly rate for production workers is increased to $1.46½; General Motors' rate has been figured at $1.42½ and Chrysler's at $1.44½.

Representatives of both management and union said they regarded the provisions yet to be considered as "minor" and not likely to present difficulty. The new contract, when finally drafted and signed, they said, will run for a minimum of two years.

Today's wage and pension agreement undoubtedly forestalls a threatened strike among the Ford production workers. A 30-day strike notice filed by the UAW-CIO expired last Tuesday.

Yet to be settled is a 4-week-old strike of 3800 Ford foremen, members of the Independent Foremen's Association of America. The dispute involves union recognition and a special committee of the UAW-CIO international executive board will consider next Tuesday a petition from the foremen's union that UAW-CIO workers respect picket lines the foremen have thrown around the Ford plant in nearby Dearborn.

Senate Extends Export Controls On Scarce Items

By The Associated Press

The Senate yesterday approved by voice vote a two weeks' emergency extension of legislation limiting export and import of certain scarce commodities.

The resolution continuing until July 15 legislation already on the statute books was sent to the House.

Senator Wiley (R., Wis.) offered the resolution as a stop-gap for a pending bill which would authorize extension of controls for a year beyond June 30.

He explained to the Senate there will not be time for both the House and Senate to act before scheduled expiration date, Monday midnight.

Wiley told the Senate that if the control legislation is permitted to lapse, it will "create a situation dangerous to our economy."

He said that ships ready to sail for Russia are waiting on the West Coast, and that if exports controls are to lapse for even a day, "they will sail."

Wiley did not elaborate on this point.

Executive Refuses to Accept Bonus Because of High Taxes

Milwaukee, June 27 (AP).—E. B. Tilton, president of the Vilter Manufacturing Co., declared today that "due to excessive and confiscatory individual income taxes" he would accept no compensation for his services to the firm for the last two months of the calendar year.

Tilton made public a letter to the company's board of directors stating that "additional compensation is no incentive when a large portion of it must be turned over to governmental agencies where most of it will be wasted."

The Vilter Co. manufactures refrigerating and air conditioning equipment.

Tilton disclosed his salary contract called for $18,000 per year with an estimated bonus of $18,000 based on company operations for the year. Thus, his probable gross loss in income for the two months would be $6000.

"Too large a portion of the income of American taxpayers is being used for governmental purposes," Tilton added. "For example, under present tax regulations a man with two dependents who earns $5000 works more than one month each year to support the politicians, loafers and deadbeats of the entire world."

Official of Store Denies Embezzling

Chicago, June 27 (AP).—William J. Cooney, 50, pleaded innocent today to a charge of embezzling between $75,000 and $100,000 from the Walgreen Drug Co. of which he was assistant treasurer.

Chief Justice Harold G. Ward of the criminal court set July 11 for trial. State's Attorney William J. Touhy said Cooney told prosecutors he had taken funds over a period of nine years to cover losses on investments and race-horse bets.

'Politics Out', Eisenhower Says In Accepting Columbia Post

General Eisenhower told a press conference yesterday that in accepting the presidency of Columbia University he had no political ambitions of any kind.

In his new post, he said, his general objectives will be the same as while in active Army service—working the "national and international welfare," for world peace, backed by a strong America.

"I firmly believe," said Eisenhower, "that the future of civilization is absolutely dependent upon finding some way of resolving international differences without resorting to war, and I believe that one of the main pillars of such a structure is a strong United States.

Explains Views On Strength

"And I don't mean by strong merely military strength—I mean strong economically and strong morally, and strong in every possible way there is to be strong. That is only kind of thinking I can take to my new job."

General "Ike" anticipated reporters' questions about politics by stating that "to clear up any doubt" he would go on record as follows:

"My interest in politics in the future will be no greater, so far as I am personally concerned, than it has been in the past. I am taking a job that is, as far as I am concerned, removed from politics—personal politics."

Later he repeated the statement for a reporter, agreeing that he was making it definite and with no qualifications that he had "no personal ambitions myself regarding politics."

The Gallup Poll

Only One Motorist in Three Knows His License Number

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., June 27.—Only one third of the car owners of the country can offhand remember the license number of their cars. The other two thirds can't.

Car owners were asked:

Offhand, can you tell me the exact license number of your car?

The results follow:

Thirty-two per cent said definitely that they know the number, and many started to reel it off.

Twenty per cent said they weren't sure what the number is.

Forty-eight per cent frankly admitted that they don't know their own number.

Among men, 37 per cent say they know the number, while the rest don't know or aren't sure. Among women, only 24 per cent know.

The poll solves one mystery. Now we know why, when the chairman of the Ladies Aid Society announces that a blue Chevvy with license B7843 is blocking the driveway and will the owner please move it, nobody in the audience stirs. The lady in question doesn't remember her own number.

Mrs. Siegel to Tell All

Los Angeles, June 27 (AP).—Mrs. Esther Siegel, divorced wife of gangster Benjamin (Bugsy) Siegel, was questioned at the district attorney's office today and promised to "tell anything she knows" about the slain man's life.

Fare Increase Bolsters CTC Net in Month

By S. Oliver Goodman

Bolstered by the fare increase on May 11, Capital Transit Co., yesterday reported its best month's net income for the current year. However, the May net was still under that of the same 1946 month.

Net for the latest month was $127,255, compared with $39,597 in April and $161,418 in May, 1946. The other three months of the current year were written in red ink.

Unless a decline in passengers accelerates, monthly nets of Capital Transit for the rest of the year should show increases over last year. Observers base that belief on the following mathematics: if the fare increase had gone into effect on May 1, the month's net income would have been $187,860. The company averaged $6060 daily net income after the boosted fares on May 11.

May operating revenues of $2,418,686 were 2 per cent higher, but operating expenses of $1,825,139 were 9 per cent heavier. Revenue passengers for the month numbered 33,727,221, a decrease of 1,867,835 or 5.2 per cent.

For the first five months this year, Capital Transit reported a net deficit of $12,998 against net income of $696,975 in the corresponding period last year. Operating revenues of $10,971,268 were down 3.8 per cent, while operating expenses of $8,981,854 were up 0.3 per cent.

Revenue passengers for the period aggregated 164,287,567, a decline of 7,951,737 or 4.6 per cent.

F St. Personality

Assets $11,118,000 and Walter S. Pratt. That's the way Equitable Cooperative Building Association should list its resources. Whether the dollar total or the president's name should come first is a moot question.

PRATT

If ever a man was a substantial part of an institution, 67-year-old Pratt is that man. For 48 years he has been associated with Equitable. His ideology is that of Equitable. Helpfulness, not moneymaking. His outside activities breathe that spirit.

He's president of the Washington Home for Foundlings, head of the Warwick Memorial Cancer Clinic, president of Montgomery County Tuberculosis Association, officer and director of two slum clearance projects.

Born in Washington, he graduated from Columbia University with a law degree in 1903. A hard worker, his relaxation comes with light gardening on his 5-acre estate at Forest Glen, Md. Also, is an avid reader but "nothing frivolous" for him. Hasn't had a vacation in six years.

Week's Sales Up 4 Per Cent Here

Washington department store sales in the week ended June 20 increased 4 per cent over the same 1946 period, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday.

At the same time, the bank reported that this city's retail sales in May were 8 per cent improved. For the first five months local sales were 3 per cent higher than in the like 1946 period.

New Airfreight Group

Following a meeting here this week, formation of the Airfreight Forwarder Association was announced yesterday. The new group comprises the sales and handling services of many airfreight lines.

Elected officers are Allen Dean, Detroit, president; A. N. Wiley, New York City, first vice president; W. L. Thompson, Los Angeles, second vice president; Frank V. Gandola, Cleveland, secretary, and Peter A. Bernacki, Philadelphia, treasurer.

Among its avowed aims, the association will consolidate small shipments into volume loads, provide pickup and delivery trucking service and load planes.

WHI Spend $3,328,950

Directors of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. approved additional expenditures of $3,328,950 for improvement and expansion of equipment and buildings in the District of Columbia. The board's action brings the total authorized to date for expenditure this year to $13,362,000.

Directors of Liberty National Bank declared the regular semiannual dividend of $4 a share on capital stock, payable July 15 to stock of record July 8, President Michael F. Calnan

Fantasy Salted With Satire

Gwenn's Kris Kringle In 'Miracle' a Delight, Especially at the Bar

By Richard L. Coe

A DELIGHTFULLY COMIC FILM has arrived at the Palace—"Miracle on 34th Street." In six months' time it probably will be cropping up on the year's "ten best" lists. Barring a miracle on F st., it will be on ours.

Edmund Gwenn

It's a fantasy, but don't let that worry you. Some brilliant make-believe, particularly by Edmund Gwenn, carries it off with just the right combination of humor and sentiment. And for a dash of realism-cum-fantasy there's peace, perfect peace, between Macy's and Gimbel's.

Though Maureen O'Hara and John Payne get the top billing, it's Edmund Gwenn who makes the picture. He plays a bearded old man who has the wit to tell people he's Santa Claus. Though the picture suggests that Gwenn really thinks he is Santa Claus, this veteran actor is subtle enough to indicate that he's playing a bemused oldster who's kidding the die-hards in a most aloof manner.

In carrying off his daft pleasantry, Gwenn's Kris Kringle makes high sport of our modern manners. First he tackles progressive education in the guise of a youngster whose mother has taught her to believe only in what she can see and prove. Then he tangles with a phychologist more in need of being ministered unto than of ministering. Ultimately he winds up in a law court whose election-conscious judge has the unpleasant choice, on Christmas Eve, of deciding not only whether Gwenn is Kris Kringle, but whether there is such a person at all.

This brings on quite the most amusing court scene in many a day. Gene Lockhart is superb as the judge who knows he can't offend the electorate and hold his job. The sly, unhappy manner he has of getting the advice of that political genius, William Frawley, sums up his miserable predicament. As Gwenn's lawyer, John Payne clears up the point that since everyone else knows exactly who he is, Gwenn is entitled to say who HE is. That there should be any question, particularly in the Christmas season, that such a person as Santa exists, becomes unthinkable to courtroom logic.

"MIRACLE ON 34th STREET," 20th Century-Fox release produced by William Perlberg, screenplay and direction by George Seaton, from a story by Valentine Davies. At the Palace Theater.

writer George Seaton has evolved a mythical Mr. Macy (however realistic the setting, there actually is no such person, if you'll pardon us anticipating inevitable questions!) who shakes hands with Mr. Gimbel of the store down Herald Square. Santa, you see, has been advising people that if Macy's doesn't have it and cheap, you can get your gift elsewhere. This barb at our national commercial instincts is neat.

While one must defer to Valentine Davies, who wrote the original story, and adapter-director Seaton, the blithe good nature of "Miracle on 34th Street" would hardly have come off without its expert character actors. Besides Gwenn's superb job and Lockhart's fine judge, there are immensely resourceful portraits by Porter Hall, as the store's unhappy psychologist; Jerome Cowan, as the prosecuting attorney whose own son guilelessly comes out against him, and Natalie Wood, the heroine's progressively educated daughter whose crushing Christmas demand our resourceful Santa is able to meet.

"Miracle on 34th Street," in short, has enough sentiment for the most wishy-washy of us and enough satire to bemuse the most disenchanted.

Prize-Winning Cast Still Attends School

New York.—The first international convention of the motion picture industry will be held in Hollywood in '48 . . . The entire cast of "Brigadoon," the musical which won the Critics' Circle Prize, is taking lessons in acting. Cheryl Crawford the producer, decided to reward the cast — and to relieve the monotony of summer — by engaging Lee Strassberg, the drama director, to give them lessons in the drama between performances . . . One of America's most famous and respected financiers put up the $28,000 to repatriate the 320 wounded members of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade who had fought in Spain and were stranded in Paris. He said: "I did it because they're Americans and they fought for what they believed."

Marcia Davenport

Funk & Wagnalls published a book, "The Modern Gunsmith," to sell at $15 a copy. The editors decided to use the Social Register listings in a mail campaign to sell the book. They felt that Social Registerites, with their shooting lodges, etc., would be interested. Not one order was received . . . The editors then decided to use the subscription list of "The American Rifleman," a magazine whose circulation never can worry Crowell-Collier or Curtis Publications. And at $15 a copy more than 30,000 books were sold.

Before Tom Beck, the magazine publisher, took off on the inaugural round-the-world flight of Pan-American Airways, he bought a $100,000 insurance policy, with a stipulation that in the event of his death the money is to go to the purchase of penicillin for the Ethiopians . . . Maurice Abravenal, who has been conducting at the top Broadway musical shows, was just named director and permanent conductor of the Salt Lake City Philharmonic Orchestra . . . Marcia Davenport's new book will be called "East Side, West Side." The novelist, now in Prague, discovered that to most Europeans the title indicated something political—the East vs. West. In the European translations, therefore, the book will be called "The Sidewalks of New York."

Jim Tully, who died recently was helpful and encouraging to the young writers of the tough, realist school of which he fancied himself top graduate. When he met John Fante, author of "Dago Red" and "Wait Until Spring, Bandini," Tully advised him: "See this book I'm carrying? It's the Oxford Book of Verse. There's real writing in this. If I were you, I'd first earn enough money to buy this book and then keep it and read it. Yes, I'd tell all young writers, 'Save up your pennies and then go out and buy yourself a copy of this book'." Fante took the book from Tully's hand, opened it and on the first page saw the faded stamp: "Property of the Tulsa Public Library."

Group to Have 25th Birthday

The silver jubilee of the founding of the D. C. Organized Bible Class Association will be observed with a community service on the Courthouse lawn, Leesburg, Va., at 8 p. m., July 6.

On July 4, 1922, a small group of the district Bible classmen went to Leesburg for a weekend conference. Out of that grew the association and its annual Labor Day conferences at Western Maryland College, Westminster. The association now has more than 16,000 members in hundreds of Bible classes.

Highlights of the anniversary program will be the Rev. J. Shenton Bourne, pastor of Leesburg Methodist Church, scene of the 1922 Bible conference, and Dr. Page McK. Etchison, president of the D. C. Organized Bible Class Association and religious work secretary of the Central YMCA.

St. Peter's Day To Be Observed At Poolesville

The centennial of St. Peter's Episcopal Church in Poolesville, Md., will be celebrated tomorrow—St. Peter's Day. It will also mark the 200th anniversary of the St. Peter's Parish.

The Right Rev. Angus Dun, Bishop of the Washington Episcopal Diocese, will speak at 11 a. m. and the Rev. Herbert Jukes, rector of the parish, will preside.

After a luncheon at 12:30 p. m. in the Poolesville High School Auditorium, there will be a ceremony in the church, where the Montgomery County Historical Society will present a commemorative plaque to the church. Former Senator George L. Radcliffs of Maryland, president of the Maryland State Historical Society, will speak. Mrs. William E. Williams will unveil the plaque.

Early Settler Origin

Like other Maryland Episcopal churches, St. Peter's originated in the early settlers' efforts to establish the Church of England in Maryland.

History records that Bishop William R. Whittingham of the Maryland Diocese, consecrated St. Peter's February 28, 1850.

Divided by Assembly

In 1692, the Maryland Assembly passed an act dividing the 10 counties into 30 parishes. As time passed, smaller parishes were created from the larger ones.

Eden Parish, named for the then Governor of the Maryland Province, was renamed St. Peter's Parish in 1792. Monocacy Chapel served as St. Peter's Parish Church until 1847.

Rally Call Spreads the News At Luther Place Memorial

Folks around Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle, count on the Rally Call when they want to know what's going on in the congregation.

This mimeographed, semimonthly news sheet has hardly missed an edition since it started in 1932 with a handful of copies for the young people.

Now grown to manhood, the Rally Call boasts four pages and a circulation of 300 copies among folks of all ages in the church.

The members like the Rally Call because it has all the personal touch of a country weekly. There are items about Jane Doe, Government girl going home to visit her folks in Peoria, notes about the Rev. Ralph Tabor's sermon of the previous Sunday, and little bits of human interest.

Coeditors are George Towberman and Louise Gertz. They alternate in getting the Rally Call to press. Towberman, a cost accountant with the Postoffice Department, dashes from his office on edition nights—generally Thursdays—and grinds out the Rally Call on a well-worn mimeograph machine on the second floor of the parish hall at Vermont ave. and N. sts. nw. When Miss Gertz' turn comes, she publishes Saturday nights.

Church folks generally get their Rally Call before or after church services from the hands of the editors, themselves. Towberman finds time for other church work, too. He is Scoutmaster of Troop 83, sponsored by the Box Bible Class of Emory Methodist Church, 6100 Georgia ave. nw.; president of the Young People's Fellowship Council of Luther Place Church and teacher of a Sunday school class of high school age boys.

Over the years, hundreds of young people have helped publish the Rally Call. Many of the volunteers are Federal workers who have found in the Rally Call an outlet for their creative abilities.

Towerman has been attending Luther Place since 1929. He lives with his father and stepmother, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Towberman, at 1601 Fillmore st., Arlington.

Among the pioneer staff members of the Rally Call were Ralph H. Keister, now living at 8908 Mohawk lane, Bethesda, Md.; George Brinkman, Miss Ruth Blackburn, Adeline Anderson Storry, Miss Joanna Schwarzenstein and Mrs. Walter Klaerner (nee Ruth Keller).

Young People's Fellowship Sunday will be observed tomorrow at Luther Place Church. George Towberman, as retiring president of the Youth Fellowship, will speak and assist in the installation of 32 officers of various youth groups. Miss Ruth Ellefson and Fred Wilson will assist Dr. L. Ralph Tabor in conducting the service.

There will also be a Young People's Fellowship Day dinner in the parish hall after the morning service, and a supper at 6:30 p. m. in grove 23, Rock Creek Park. The Rev. Donald F. Bautz, executive director of the Washington Lutheran Inner Mission Society, will address vespers in the park at 7:30 p. m.

Unitarians Aid Summer Camp; Mission Project Needs Support

The Misses Harriet Morrison, Laura Rowse and Priscilla Staples of All Souls' Unitarian Church will leave Monday for the Unitarian Workcamp at Greenfield, N. H. There they will assist in aiding underprivileged children from Boston.

Persons wishing to contribute funds toward sending boys and girls for a two weeks' trip to Camp Bennett at Brookeville, Md., are urged to contact the Rev. and Mrs. Herbert Eberhardt, Central Union Mission, 613 C st. nw.

Vacation Bible Schools

Commencement exercises for the Vacation Bible School of Petworth Baptist Church, 7th and Randolph sts. nw., will take place Wednesday at 7:30 p. m. Fifteen Sunday school officers and teachers, led by the Rev. David H. Stone, assistant pastor of Petworth Baptist Church, will leave Thursday for the Baptist Assembly at Ridgecrest, N. C.

Friends' Project

A community vacation school for children of various races and denominations will be held from July 7 to 19 (Sundays excluded) from 9:30 a. m. to 12 p. m. at All Souls' Unitarian Church, 16th and Harvard sts. nw. It will be sponsored by the Friends' Meeting of Washington. The theme will be "Friendship in One World." There will be Bible study, play and creative work.

Interdenominational Youth Organization Brings Sunshine to Industrial Home School

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Reporter

An interdenominational group of more than 200 young folks brings sunshine to residents of the Industrial Home School at 2453 Wisconsin ave. nw.

Through the Volunteer Projects Committee, the young people provide music lessons, athletic instruction, letter writing assistance and Protestant church services. They have also formed clubs at the home.

The volunteers come from Calvary, Mount Vernon Place and Metropolitan Memorial Methodist churches; Gunton-Temple Memorial and Chevy Chase Presbyterian Churches; Columbia Heights Christian Church, and the Woman's Baptist Missionary Association. In addition, there are also workers from the Washington Story-Telling League, St. Albans School, Georgetown and Friendship Lions and Washington Rotary Clubs.

Chairman of the Volunteer Projects Committee is Miss Martha C. Uhland, 6116 Western ave., Chevy Chase, and secretary-treasurer, John R. Davis, jr., 500 Cumberland ave., Chevy Chase.

The cop on the Mount Pleasant "beat" was viewing the outdoor procession opening a Community Vacation Bible School sponsored by National Baptist Memorial Church, 16th st. and Columbia rd. nw.

"See that lad carrying the banner," the cop said to a minister. "He has been a problem child of the neighborhood. Now the church has gotten him interested in the summer school."

Priest Credited for Family Prayer Resurgence

By Bob Considine
Copyright, International News Service

New York, June 27 (INS).—There is a resurgence of family prayers in the United States these nights, the polls show, and much of that miracle can be traced to a big, sandy-haired priest named Patrick Peyton of County Mayo.

There's quite a story behind it.

Remembering his own youth in Ireland and the extraordinarily physical and spiritual sacrifices his family made to see him become a priest, he dedicated his life to restoring the saying of the rosary in Catholic homes before bedtime.

But a world that sometimes had difficulty in trying to understand what he was trying, caused him to make certain alterations in his program. The result is that this simple, warm-hearted man has set a whole country to praying with a nonsecretarian radio prayer service which the Mutual Broadcasting System carries each Thursday night at 10 p. m. (EDT).

Family Ritual

The story starts back in County Mayo where Patrick and his 10 brothers and sisters were wont to gather around their father and mother at the end of the day's work and say their beads aloud.

The Peytons were a poor, hard-working family, but they were a closely knit one and when 19-year-old Patrick left to go to the wondrous place called the United States of America there was cause for both joy and tears at their cottage.

"In that land, son," his invalid father told him before Pat left, "go down on your knees before a picture of Our Lord at night. Be faithful to him."

Father Peyton, remembering this last meeting with his father, told us, with proud feeling, "the good man never said a thing about making money."

In 1943, Father Peyton, after a miraculous recovery from a serious illness, began his march toward the restoration of the rosary, as an act of thanksgiving for the blessings bestowed upon him.

Program Costs Him $2000

Today he is the moderator of a coast-to-coast half-hour radio show that costs him $2000 a week. It wouldn't cost him that, for people want to help him, but he insists on paying Caesar Petrillo's musicians $1200 a broadcast and the AFRA minimum of $37 a broadcast to each of the prayer-offerers on the program, including, on two occasions, Bing Crosby, who, like the others, quickly returns the money.

At first he preached home prayers from his pulpit. Then, with what money he could scrape together, he issued pamphlets and sent them through the country. Then Station WABY, in Albany, put him—and his rich Irish voice—on the air.

He came to New York to try to interest the networks, but got a cool reception. One network chief told him, when he mentioned that he might get some Hollywood stars to join in his radio prayers, "I'll quit work if you can get names like that."

He went to Hollywood and, seized with a fit of shyness, asked the cab driver to take him to the nearest church to light a candle. As it turned out it was the church of an old priest who had said mass, once, in the very church where Father Pat's mother had been married in Ireland. Through him he met the archbishop, who introduced him to Joe Breen of the movie industry.

Adventists Urged to Heed Promises of God

In these critical days men need to apply to their hearts and lives the rich promises of God, Elder L. K. Dickson, vice president, of the General Conference, Seventh Day Adventists, said yesterday in Takoma.

"In this old world filled as it is with uncertainty until the very foundations of civilization are trembling and falling to destruction, how good it is to know that our Mighty Helper will restrain the forces of darkness until His will is performed," Dickson said.

Through His great promises, God reveals the certainty of His presence and participation in human affairs, Dickson told the eighth-day session of the Adventists' 10-day Potomac Conference.

A symposium on reporting evangelistic progress in the denomination will be given at 3 p. m. today by radio broadcasters and evangelists.

Participating in the program will be Elders L. A. Hansen, Takoma Park; E. F. Koch, Richmond, Va.; R. W. Woods, Staunton, Va.; L. R. Mansell, Lynchburg, Va; Donald F. Haynes, Newport News, Va.; R. L. Boothby and G. S. Rapp, both of Takoma Park.

The camp meeting will close tomorrow night with Elder Koch, pastor of the Richmond SDA church, officiating.

Haefner Stands Bosox on Ears, 3 to 0

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

AFTER THE EVENTS of this week, it is easy to take the affirmative of the proposition: The Peepul Want Night Ball.

Clark Griffith, a man of the People, is not the one to dispute it, particularly with his gate receipts barometer in hand.

POVICH

When the Nats, with a three-game losing streak, draw 18,000 customers in a night game and then, after a somewhat guhlorious victory over the Red Sox, play to only 5179 fans the following afternoon, Griffith sees the People's point, and his own.

"Consarn it," he said, "you have to give the people what they want. It's all Tom Yawkey's fault. He wouldn't agree to let the Red Sox play another night game this trip. He won't let 'em play more'n two games at night in any other city. We ought to change that league rule saying we have to get the visiting club's consent before we can schedule night games."

It is an understandable reaction of a man who by merely flicking on $500 worth of kilowatts can multiply his profits by three or four hundred per cent.

THE PUBLIC'S PREFERENCE for night ball was long ago established and Griffith readily concedes his own mistaken point of view, when seven years ago, he battled vigorously against the introduction of night ball in the majors. "Night ball is for the minors," he said at that time. "The big league game was meant to be played in God's own sunshine."

Since then, the Nats' owner has done the neatest flip-flop in the baseball business. He was the first to campaign for unlimited night games. He's beefing at the "narrow-mindedness" of the other club owners who aren't won over to unlimited night ball, like the Red Sox and the Yankees.

"If they don't want to give their own public what they'd rather see, at least they shouldn't object to playing night games on the road. Look them over, and you'll see that it's only the rich clubs like the Red Sox, Yankees and Tigers who are putting a limit on night games. They don't have any consideration for the clubs that aren't rich, and need night ball to help meet the payrolls."

YAWKEY'S OBJECTION to night games is complete, at any rate. He doesn't like night ball, and it was only with reluctance that he put lights in Fenway Park this year. He was virtually driven to that act by the competition of the Braves in Boston who were playing almost unlimited night ball and winning the Boston fans with a fourth-place ball club last year.

As it is, Yawkey limits all visiting clubs to two night games a year in Fenway Park. Manager Joe Cronin shares Yawkey's feelings about the undesirability of night ball. He says first off the ballplayers don't like it, and that the mixed-up business of night games and day games is an ordeal for his athletes.

"You find your club playing a night game tonight, and a double header tomorrow he points out. "That leaves the ballplayers too tuckered to give their best. And if you run into rain and postponements, the next thing you know double headers are piling and you're playing twilight ball, which is the worst kind. I'm glad Mr. Yawkey feels the same way about it."

TED WILLIAMS LENDS his voice to the antinight-ball feelings of the Red Sox bosses, and with them Williams' voice is not an inconsiderable one. Williams claims that he doesn't hit well at night. "The damp air deadens the ball," he said yesterday, "and it doesn't go anywhere. I hit a ball here the other night that should have been out of the park, but Buddy Lewis caught it 20 feet in front of the fence."

Williams has the same complaint as other hitters who don't like night ball. He says it makes winners out of mediocre pitchers. In the daytime, he points out, the hitter can see the spin on a pitcher's curve almost as soon as it leaves his hand, but at night no spin is visible.

"It makes a guess hitter out of everybody," he says.

That's why there are so many flops among the pitchers who come up from the minors, says Catcher Birdie Tebbetts.

"They win down there at night ball and their records are misleading. When they have to pitch day ball in the majors, they're not good enough."

Tebbetts adds another note: "The ball is deader in the big leagues this year, anyway. I know it's soft. I can twist the cover on many a ball that comes into my mitt."

Johnson School Graduates To Be Guests of Griffith

The Walter Johnson Memorial Baseball School diploma took on added importance yesterday.

Clark Griffith, owner of the Nats, announced that August 2 would be Walter Johnson school day at the ballpark, and that the diploma would entitle all graduates of the school to free admittance.

The Nats play their chief nemesis, the Chicago White Sox, that Saturday.

The diploma was presented to each 14-year-old and under boy who attended the Johnson School classes in Washington during April and May. The school winds up in Prince Georges, Alexandria, Arlington and Fairfax Counties on Monday, and diplomas will be awarded there, as well as in Montgomery County, within the next 10 days.

Monday will be the last chance that the youngsters of Prince Georges, Alexandria, Arlington and Fairfax will have to register for the school, and still be eligible for the diploma.

These four countries, under the direction of The Post and the respective Recreation Departments, held their second classes yesterday with a total of 1200 kids turning out.

In three of the counties, former professional and collegiate athletes were in charge of the classes.

But the Alexandria schools, under the direction of Gene Barnwell, tried something new. They held three showings of the moving picture, "Inside Baseball." It showed a game between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Boston Braves, with an instructive analysis of the strategy. At night, Russell Herrick, former pitcher, for the Danville, Va., team spoke to the Johnson School kids at the Alexandria Boys Club on mound technique.

For those who missed the performance yesterday, there will be a repeat showing at 10 a. m. at the Community Center, 1605 Cameron st.

New York, June 27 (AP).—Babe Ruth's condition was reported as "very good" today by the officials of the hospital where the former home-run king has been resting and under observation since Tuesday.

Tigers Claw Browns in 18-Hit Spree

Detroit, June 27 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers, returning home after a disastrous Eastern road trip on which they dropped 10 of 11 games, smashed out 18 hits today to wallop the St. Louis Browns, 11 to 1, in a twilight game called in the last of the eighth because of darkness.

The Detroiters, whose bats were practically stilled on their recent road trip, had a field day at the bat as they pummeled three Brownie pitchers while Virgil Trucks coasted in to post his first win since May 11.

Every Tiger except Pat Miller got himself at least one hit, with Lake, Cullenbine and Wagner leading the hit parade with three apiece. Trucks contributed two hits to make his cause easier.

Nelson Potter started for the Browns and was tagged for 12 hits and 7 runs in his five-inning tour. Sam Zoldak and Walter Brown finished up for the St. Louis club.

A shirt-sleeved crowd of 18,330 fans saw the game.

Roy Cullenbine and Hoot Evers hit for the circuit, Cullenbine getting his seventh of the season in the fifth with none on while Evers got his fifth in the seventh with none aboard.

Cancer Drive Gets Boost From Pony Show Tomorrow

Warrenton, Va., June 27 (AP).—America's biggest "little-horse" show comes off Saturday with the ponies grabbing all the blue ribbons, the kids having most of the fun, and the Damon Runyon Cancer Fund pocketing all the dough.

It's the twenty-eighth edition of the unique Warrenton Pony Show—an affair billed, staged, and managed throughout by youngsters 18 years of age and under.

The young folks go out and practically lasso the ponies themselves. They also chose the judges, designate all the classes of competition, edit the offical program. It is their idea to donate the cash proceeds to the cancer fund. It's likely to be a considerable sum, too.

The 27 classes will be in four divisions — pony races, pony hunters, open jumpers, and miscellaneous — with championship classes in the first three divisions.

Harvard, Cornell Racing Favorites

Seattle, June 27 (AP).—The men who know their crew racing tonight were high on Harvard and Cornell in tomorrow's second running of the Lake Washington regatta, a 2000-meter rush with 12 of the Nations top crews shooting for the unofficial American sprint championship.

But the experts had their fingers crossed because they knew that almost any one of the entrants could hit its rowing peak and slip in for a victory.

The distance—just under a mile and a quarter—could be made to order for Yale's high-stroking eight. Washington's conbination frosh-varsity outfit has looked extremely smooth in practice. California, Princeton, Massachusetts Tech and Penn all have shown well in the workouts.

Dryas Repeats Victory In French Race

Paris, June 27 (AP).—Alberto J. Duggan's 9-year-old Dryas today repeated his performance of last year and won the celebrated Prix Des Drags after losing the Grand Steeplechase De Paris.

The Argentine owner's horse fell in the steeplechase last Sunday as he did a year ago, only to come on five days later to take the 700,000-francs (about $5000) Drags prize. Mell-Melo and Amor finished second and third respectively.

Dryas was ridden by Robert Bates.

Mrs. Stokes Wins District Golf, 2 and 1

Mrs. Walter Stokes of Manor won her third Women's District Golf Association Championship as she defeated Mrs. Marie Walper of Prince Georges 2 and 1, yesterday at Manor.

By winning, the defending champion avenged a defeat in the finals of this same tournament at the hands of Mrs. Walper in 1942.

Playing steady golf, the Manor stylist and Mrs. Walper were deadlocked at the end of the first nine with both carding 37's, although Mrs. Stokes took only 12 putts.

At the end of fifteen holes they were still tied, but Mrs. Stokes captured the 16th and quickly made the most of her advantage by winning the 17th with a par 3 to end the match. Her score for 17 holes was 77.

Mrs. Stokes had advanced to the finals by defeating Mrs. Richard Kreuzburg of Kenwood, 3 and 2, while Mrs. Walper downed Mrs. S. F. Little of Army-Navy, 2 up in 18 holes.

By taking the WDGA title Mrs. Stokes added to her growing list of championships this season, which already includes the Maryland State medal, the Payne Cup, and the Middle Atlantic crown.

In the first flight consolation match, Mrs. E. P. Moore of Army-Navy downed Mrs. Rex Howard of Kenwood, 7 and 5.

Mrs. Florence Godfrey of Congressional took the second flight championship by defeating Mrs. Leo Butler of Manor, 3 and 2, while Mrs. J. J. Corson of Washington won the second flight consolation from Mrs. G. W. Calvert, also of Washington, 4 and 3.

Third flight honors went to Mrs. R. E. Zuber, Manor, who beat Mrs. Frank Mirth of Indian Spring, 3 and 1. Mrs. S. K. Franks, Manor won the consolation from Mrs. Ted Burrows of Indian Spring, 5 and 4.

Injured Player Reported 'Fair'

Jamestown, N. Y., June 27 (AP).—Bobby Williams, Hornell Pirates' shortstop who was injured critically last night in a Pony League baseball game here, was reported in "fair" condition today.

Attendants at Jamestown General Hospital said Williams had regained consciousness and was able to talk, but that they would be unable to take X-rays for a day or so.

Williams was hurt in the sixth inning of a game won by Jamestown Falcons when he fell in taking a throw from third and was struck at the base of the skull as Russ Kearns, Jamestown catcher, slid to second.

Pirates Smash Cubs, 12-8; Greenberg Blasts 12th Homer

Chicago, June 27 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates managed to turn back a hard finishing drive by the Chicago Cubs today for a 12-8 decision that gave them their second straight victory in the series and extended the losing streak of the fading Chicagoans to four in a row.

The Pirates pounced on Bill Lee for four runs in the first inning and in the fifth broke loose for a cluster of five to rout Hank Wyse and take an 11-1 lead. And they needed every bit of it as the Cubs finally came on to drive Jim Bagby off the mound and outslug the Bucs 17 hits to 14.

Hank Greenberg smashed out his twenth homer with none on in the fourth. The Cubs exploded a three-homer salvo in the sixth when Bill Nicholson smashed out his ninth homer of the season and Dom Dallessandro and Don Johnson each got their first.

Hursey Hurt; Kapilow Bout Is Postponed

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

A two-week postponement of the Smuggy Hursey-Danny Kapilow middleweight bout, scheduled for Tuesday night at Griffith Stdium, was necessitated yesterday when Hursey received a deep cut on his lower lip in a sparring session at the Liberty A. C.

Hursey was the fourth and final round of a spirited workout with Al Wright, local preliminary boy, when Wright tagged him with a stinging left hook to the mouth. Blood flowed freely from Hursey's lip and he was immediately taken to the office of Dr. Don S. Knowlton, the District Boxing Commission's doctor. Eight stitches were required.

To Be Held July 14

Promoter Goldie Ahearn, Liberty A. C. ringmaster who envisioned a $60,000 gate Tuesday night, announced that the fight had been rescheduled for Monday night, July 14, at the Stadium. All tickets purchased for Tuesday night's fight will be honored on July 14, he added.

The two-week postponement played havoc with the Liberty A.C.'s production schedule for July. Ahearn had just about completed plans for a lightheavy brawl between Archie Moore, who bludgeoned his way to a decision over Curtis Sheppard here two weeks ago, and Jimmy Bivins, the Cleveland clouter.

Tuesday's Hursey-Kapilow affair had all the earmarks of topping the $54,000 gross paid to see Bee Bee Washington and Aaron Perry fight at the ball park last summer. As of yesterday, the promoters had more than $3000 in cash in the strongbox and almost $1500 in reservations.

Hursey Idle for a Week.

Hursey and Wright had been sparring all week and Wright, a big middleweight, was giving the Smug a stiff time of it in their practice sessions.

Hursey will lay off until Monday a week to give his injury sufficient time to heal. The Smug weighed 159 yesterday, four pounds more than the 155 he has guaranteed to make for Kapilow.

Kapilow, who's been working in New York with former Welterweight Champion Marty Servo, hopes to weigh at least 147 for the 10-rounder.

Doyle Benefit Bout Planned

Cleveland, June 27 (AP).—Welterweight Champion Ray Robinson, whose eight-round technical knockout of Jimmy Doyle here Tuesday ngiht resulted in Doyle's death, said today he wanted to appear in a benefit bout for the Los Angeles boxer's parents.

Robinson discussed the possibilities of such a bout with Paul Doyle, Jimmy's manager, and Louis Munalo, long-time friend of the dead fighter.

The fight would be held in Los Angeles, it was reported, with Robinson donating his purse.

Meanwhile, Mayor Thomas A. Burke said he would ask the Cleveland Boxing Commission to consider the advisability of establishing a rule prohibiting any boxer with a medical record of a previous head injury from appearing in a local ring.

Mrs. Reynolds Takes Crown

Staunton, Va., June 27 (AP).—Mrs. James Reynolds of Richmond's Glenwood Country Club, successfully defended her Virginia State Women's golf championship today at the Ingleside Country Club by pulling from behind to beat Mrs. J. B. Cralle 2d of Roanoke's Monterey Country Club, 1 up, on the nineteenth hole.

Chance Nick Jamaica Winner

New York, June 27 (AP).—Chance Nick, 5-year-old sprinter from Harry Guggenheim's Cain Hoy stable, scored an upset victory in the Saxon Woods Handicap at Empire City-at-Jamaica today, paying off to the tune of $27.20 for $2.

The son of Chance Play has started 10 times this year and his three triumphs—each time at good odds—have been recorded over the Jamaica strip.

Armed Heads Field In Equipoise Mile

Chicago, June 27 (AP).—Calumet Farm's handicap star, Armed, top weighted with 130 pounds, today headed a field of 13 for the $30,000 added Equipoise mile at Arlington Park tomorrow.

Among Armed's rivals will be With Pleasure, the 19 to 1 shot which defeated Armed by a length in the six furlong Domino Handicap a week ago, and Witch Sir, which won the Equipoise at odds of 50 to 1 last year, with Armed finishing third.

Mighty Mite Hurls 2d Win Over Champs

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

The weather reading at Griffith Stadium was 82 degrees yesterday, but the relative humility was wonderful for Clark Griffith to behold.

Griffith and 5179 paying fans saw the Nats shut out the Red Sox of Son-in-Law Joe Cronin, 3 to 0. It was the fifth futile attempt of Cronin's athletes to win a game in Washington this season and it was little Mickey Haefner who stood 'em off.

Haefner, who has found a club he can lick with consistency, has won only three games this season, but two of them have been at the expense of the Red Sox. Yesterday, he turned them back with seven hits, held Ted Williams hitless and permitted only three men to get past second base.

Soft Touch for Haefner

The Red Sox were a soft touch for Haefner's soft stuff. Serving up knucklers to the left-handed hitters and screwballs to the right handers, the bantam southpaw permitted nothing more than a single and the only time his shutout was seriously threatened he was helped over the hump by a rapid Vernon-to-Christman-to-Vernon double play.

The hex of the Nats over the Red Sox—they've now won five out of seven from the second-place Bostons—was working in perfect order—and they pounded out 10 hits against the pitching of Harry Dorish and Johnny Murphy. They plodded along, picking up one run at a time, but in the light of Haefner's pitching everything after their first-inning run was superfluous.

Vernon, Spence Double

Mickey Vernon and Stan Spence wrenched the first run out of rookie Dorish with a pair of well-tagged two baggers in succession after two were out, and in the third inning they upped Haefner's lead to 2-0.

That was when Eddie Yost led off with a single to left, took second on Williams' fumble and moved to third on Lewis' infield hit. He scored while Vernon was grounding out, but the Nats missed a big inning a bit later when Priddy hit into a double play with the bases full.

Al Evans drew a walk from Dorish in the fourth and a sacrifice moved him into scoring position. He crossed the plate on Lewis' single to center after Yost beat out an infield hit.

Going into the sixth inning Haefner was carving a nice three-hit shutout for himself. He had a lift in the third inning when Gerry Priddy knocked down Pesky's infield hit and whipped a throw to Yost to catch Partee, who had rounded third too far. Priddy's play not only cut off a run but retired the side.

Double Play Halts Boxer

Two pinch hitters, Rip Russell and Leon Culberson, bashed consecutive singles in the eighth to put men on first and third with one out and endanger Haefner with the heavy end of the Red Sox batting order coming up. But in this crisis Vernon grabbed a fierce grounder smash by Pesky, whipped to Christ-

Tom Brown Battles His Way Into Final Eight at Wimbledon

Bennings

At Charles Town.

DEAR FOLKS:

Chances for a clash involving Boston Man, Annie's Dream and Lawless Miss went by the boards when H. M. Simpson shipped his stable, including Boston Man, to New England. Many owners gave a sigh of relief because the big fellow outclassed local opposition, at least in distance races. Seven horses were named overnight for the Weaver Purse, topping the weekend program. The test is at a mile and a sixteenth and promises action, with such as Aldridge, Fitz Mede, Smoke Ball and Sure Gift slated to compete. The engagement of Trainer Marvin Greene and Miss Betty Ramey of Charles Town has been announced. They will be married in the fall. Jockey O. Meaux (pronounced Oh-moe) has left for Texas. He wouldn't say what part—probably "Deep in the Heart." Harry the Greek has taken over the book of Jockey C. Martinez, former employe of the Calumet Farm. Trainer Everett Brining wishes people would stop phoning him and asking him what happened to the four pounds off New Chum. Alan T. Clarke's Over Gold, almost drowned on the track two weeks ago, goes to the post on the weekend program. See you on the rail. BILL.

Geoff Brown, Petra Also Make Round

By Bill Macklin

London, June 27 (AP).—Long Tom Brown, a San Francisco law student, battled his way to the quarter-finals of the Wimbledon Tennis Championships with an uphill, five-set triumph today and was joined in the round of eight by the men who met for the title in this tournament a year ago.

The third-seeded Californian outlasted Colin Long of Australia, 3—6, 13—11, 3—6, 6—1, 6—0, drawing first blood in the celebrated duel for international honors between the ranking players of the two countries now dominating the amateur courts of the world.

Australia, which had duplicated the feat of the United States in sending four men into the round of 16, also carved out a berth in the quarter-finals, however, when Geoff Brown, seeded fifth, ousted French Davis Cupper Pierre Pellizza, 6—3, 6—2, 1—6, 6—3.

French Champ Advances

Defending Champion Yvon Petra of France, rated No. 7 this year, reached the round of eight by turning back Jeff Robson of New Zealand, 6—2, 6—3, 4—6, 6—3, despite a spotty game and numerous double faults.

Petra, who eliminated Tom Brown in five sets in the 1946 semifinals and then defeated Geoff Brown in the five-set final bout, will face Tom Brown once more in the next round.

Today's matches were delayed an hour and 15 minutes by England's heaviest rainstorm in 70 years. The downpour cut crowds to a minimum and some of the water seeped under coverings, making the turf slippery for the earlier matches.

But the few spectators who turned out were spellbound by the tussle between Brown and Long which went to the American after two hours and 15 minutes of play because he had the greater stamina.

Flatfooted at the Finish

Long, ranked fifth in Australia, simply wore himself out chasing Brown's baseline barrage and wound up the last two sets flatfooted.

Doubles favorites Jack Kramer and Bob Falkenburg of Los Angeles moved into the third round, meanwhile, by sweeping through Robert Abdesselam and Bernard Destremau of France, 6—1, 7—5, 6—3, and the second-seeded Australian pair, John Bromwich and Dinny Pails, reached the fourth round with a twin bill.

Bromwich and Pails ousted Geoff Tuckett of Britain and C. Caralulis of Romania, 6—1, 6—1, 6—0, while Jaroslav Drobny and Bohous Cernik, Czech Davis Cup stars, were beating Josef Asboth and Anton Stolpa of Hungary, 6—2, 7—5, 9—7.

The two victorious teams then returned to the court and Bromwich and Pails eliminated Drobny and Cernik, 6—2, 6—3, 6—4.

Half a dozen seeded women moved into the fourth round of their singles division in straight sets.

Top-seeded Margaret Osborne of San Francisco waltzed through Mrs. Penelope Durlac of Britain, 6—3, 6—0, and Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, Calif., seeded second, humbled Mrs. Eric Pool of Britain, 6—1, 6—0.

Palumbo Wins as Fans Boo

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., June 27.—Jockey Sammy Palumbo, who has been booed ever since this track was built in 1933, received the Bronx cheer in more generous proportions here today.

This time the crowd found fault with him because he put up a perfect ride in winning with J. K. Wynkoop's Army Belle in the Globe Purse, featuring the Friday program.

Palumbo brought the daughter of Discovery home a half length in front of R. Winchester's Darling Grace. Another half length away came A. J. Cochran's Titian to be third in the field of eight.

With Titian, winner of three straight, installed the favorite, Army Belle, in making it two in a row, paid $7. The sometimes sour mare, who is on her oats now, was clocked in 1:17 4/5 for the about 6 furlongs on a track a bit on the dull side after drying out this morning.

Palumbo hustled Army Belle into good position along the inside rail, a route he was to keep throughout the running. Darling Grace went to the front, shaking off Some Moose. Psychic Fancy was in the battle as Army Belle and Darling Grace hooked up leaving the backstretch.

In the final drive, Palumbo went into a vigorous push and Army Belle responded by collaring and then passing the combination of Darling Grace and Apprentice Jimmy Baird.

Titian's rider, Pat O'Brien, lost a stirrup early, then regained it in time to close with a rush to be third ahead of the tiring Psychic Fancy.

Palumbo also had a hand in the $65 payoff on the daily double. He was aboard G. A. Lawson's Fall Gal in the first race and the filly turned back Heaven Hill, the favorite, in the stretch drive to pay $4.40. Mike Sarno put up a good ride on Marvin and Moore's Nova's Mark in the second race. This 5-year-old maiden paid $12.60.

District Net Play Starts At Kenwood

The District of Columbia Tennis Tournament starts today at 10 a. m. on the Kenwood Country Club courts.

A field of 107 men and 18 women is entered in the tournament, which includes competition in men's singles and doubles, women's singles and doubles and mixed doubles.

Seeded at the top of the men's list is Barney Welsh, the City of Washington champion and captain of the victorious Middle-Atlantic tennis team which captured the Church Cup last week in Boston.

A strong group will challenge Welsh's bid for a sweep of the local tournaments. Dave Johnsen, Jim Thackara, Hugh Lynch, John Curtiss, Donald Leavens, Phil Neff, Alex Keiles, Buddy Adair and Bill Gifford are the seeded players Welsh will have to watch.

In the women's division, Charlotte Decker is seeded first, and with Ann Gray missing from the entry list, Miss Decker should have things her own way.

Any competition that she will have should come from Willie Herbert, Pearl McCoy and Libby Prince. Miss Herbert, in particular may pull a surprise after her splendid showing against Mary Hardwick in an exhibition match recently.

Coe, Lind Win In College Golf

Ann Arbor, Mich., June 27 (AP).—The two hottest choices of the greenside experts—tall, skinny Charley Coe of Oklahoma and curly-haired Charles (Babe) Lind or Denver University—fought their way into the quarter-final round of the national collegiate golf championship today with lopsided third round triumphs as the sloping, 6600-yard University of Michigan course started taking its toll in upsets.

Coe, 23-year-old Ardmore, Okla., product who won the trans-Mississippi amateur title last week, and the easy-going Lind, who was runner-up in the 1946 NCAA championship at Princeton University, tangle tomorrow in a quarter-final match most of the insiders consider the tournament's "pay-off" battle.

The 140-pound Coe waded into the round of eight by kaoying Michigan's talented three-sport red-head, Pete Elliott, 1-up in the second round and lashing Bob Gardner of UCLA, 5 and 4, on the third lap.

Lind disposed of Ken Risko of Swarthmore, 2 and 1, and Warren MaCarty, Pacific Army champion now of San Jose, (Calif.) State College, 4 and 3. Lind was four over par for his 32 holes today compared with Coe's card of two over par for his 32 holes today compared with Coe's card of two over par for the same distance.

The other bracket quarter-finalists were Tom Lambie, from Stanford University and Phoenix, Ariz., who had a 3 and 2 verdict over Ashby Taylor of Georgia Tech, and bespectacled Jack Coyle, Springfield, Ill., of Louisiana State who clipped Fred Wampler of Indianapolis, Purdue freshman, 6 and 4, in the third round.

New Racing Boss Calls Conference

Baltimore, June 27 (AP).—Stuart S. Janney, jr., who will succeed George P. Mahoney as State Racing Commission chairman July 1, said today that he had called a meeting of the group for July 3 to discuss harness racing and "some other things that should be decided promply."

Janney, Baltimore County sportsman, noted for his victories in Maryland's famed Maryland Hunt Cup and other steelechases, was appointed by Governor Lane to succeed Mahoney.

"I have a great deal of respect for the judgment of the other two commissioners, H. Courtney Jenifer and Frank Small, jr.," Janney said.

In the ninth the Sox couldn't get to first base against Haefner, literally.

Ted Williams three times tried to take advantage of the wide open spaces in left field after the Nats went into their Williams shift, but each time flied to Joe Grace . . . Third Baseman Eddie Yost slightly twisted his ankle in the fifth inning and gave way to Cecil Travis in the sixth . . . The two clubs meet again this afternoon with Sid Hudson pitching against Dennis Galehouse, late of the Browns, who in his debut with the Sox five days ago won a six-hitter.

SHE FLIES THROUGH FOG TO SAVE GI'S EYES—Norma Jeanne Sheehan, 19, of LaGrange, Ga., was about to be given a ticket at Atlanta Airport when she landed there in fog and rain after the field was closed. But she didn't get it when officials learned she had braved the low ceiling and poor visibility to fly James E. Murphy, a disabled war veteran, to Lawson General Hospital for an emergency eye operation. Murphy had to get to the hospital at once

Navy Wins Approval of Plan For Guided Missile Test Range

A House Armed Services subcommittee, warned of a "dangerous lag" in development of guided missiles, yesterday unanimously approved the Navy's plan for a $34,000,000 test range at Point Mugu, Calif.

It also approved a $27,850,000 aeronautical turbine laboratory to be built at Trenton, N. J.

The projects were included in a bill authorizing construction of 76 Navy installations to be erected both here and abroad at a total cost of $254,696,000. Only one Navy request was rejected—permission to buy 518 acres along the shores of Pearl Harbor to give the Navy complete control of the anchorage.

Admiral Nimitz Appears

The committee approved the bill at an unscheduled private session less than 24 hours after Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Chief of Naval Operations, had appeared personally to defend the controversial Point Mugu proposal.

He said the test range, opposed by local California groups and fishery interests, had been given the "highest priority" by the Navy because a lag in guided missile development might mean the Nation's defeat in event of another war.

He and Rear Admiral A. M. Pride, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics said the Point Mugu site, 35 miles north of Los Angeles, was ideal because missiles fired from the mainland could be tracked in flight, from off-shore islands.

The bill approves the $254,696,000 cost of the 79 projects but authorizes the Navy to seek only $127,800,000 of the total in appropriations during the next fiscal year. The remaining amount would have to be supplied in subsequent years.

Special Reserve Units Urged on Congress

By the United Press

The Army urged Congress yesterday to approve a plan to organize community reserve units of specialists, such as doctors and fire-fighters, to back up fighting forces in case of an attack.

Army officers, appearing before a Senate Armed Services Subcommittee, asked that Congress provide 130 million dollars for "incentive pay" for members of such reserve units.

Maj. Gen. William D. Old of the War Department general staff, warned that the Regular Army and the National Guard together would not be able to withstand a sudden atomic-age attack.

Murray Declines Nomination As Head of Newspaper Guild

Sioux City, Iowa, June 27 (AP).—Milton Murray today declined nomination for reelection as president of the American Newspaper Guild (CIO).

This means that the union's membership, voting by mail next fall, will choose between Harry Martin, amusements editor of the Memphis Commercial Appeal, and Willard Shelton, a Washington correspondent for PM.

It means, too, that Murray, when his term ends November 1, will step out of the office he has held since 1941.

He withdrew just before the Guild convention was to have voted on Martin, Shelton and Murray, to narrow the field to two candidates.

Repeatedly Rebuff Murray

Today's tense climax to the political campaign came after the delegates had rebuffed President Murray again and again.

The membership will choose between Eubanks and James R. Duckman of Manchester, N. H., for executive vice president. They were the only nominees.

William Rodgers was swept out of the paid job of secretary-treasurer.

He ran third in a contest with Ralph Novak, of Detroit, and G. K. Williams, of Los Angeles. Novak and Williams will be voted on by the membership. Today's vote was: Novak 163 1/3; Williams 94½; Rodgers 77 1/6.

Murray had urged the delegates to re-elect Rodgers.

The "Murray-Eubanks-Rodgers" slate that rode into guild office in 1941 has now been shattered.

Commend Wilbur Bade

The convention also:

Voted Wilbur Bade, editor of the Guild Reporter, the union's newspaper, commendation for "the fine work he has done" as editor. The motion was passed, 194 3/14 to 99 11/14, despite accusations by Murray that Bade has used the publication as a "political propaganda machine."

Recommended that the executive board study a plan introduced by the Detroit unit calling for institution of a system of professional standards in newspaper fields under Guild jurisdiction.

Approved collection of 15 cents per month per member from all members until August 1, 1948, to build a defense fund.

Referred to the membership for referendum a finance committee recommendation for a dues schedule which would become mandatory on all locals if passed.

Adopted a 25 cents per month per member increase in the per capita tax paid by locals to the ANG for wire and nonwire service members for general operations.

U. S. Must Train to Avoid War, Roberts Says

Owen J. Roberts, former Supreme Court justice, urged universal military training yesterday as a deterrent to "an all-out shooting World War III."

He said the United Nations "will be impotent to maintain world peace in the foreseeable future."

Roberts testified before the House Armed Services Committee as chairman of the new Citizens Emergency Committee for Universal Military Training. He pleaded for prompt congressional action and said "Every month's delay is a terribly dangerous thing."

Warns of Great Peril

The dangers to the security of the United States, he said, "are far greater at this moment than they were in the few years before 1941.

"While the United Nations may serve well as a forum in which the nations of the world may discuss their problems," he declared, "it never will be a security organization."

"The world placed its hope for peace and the betterment of mankind in the United Nations when it was set up," he declared. "But it is evident that U. N., now in the formative stages of its development, will be impotent to maintain world peace in the foreseeable future.

"A United Nations hamstrung by a lack of authority cannot prevent war. As long as any nation, by the use of the veto, may protect itself from the consequences of its own violation, the United Nations is powerless to take positive action against aggressor nations.

'Cheapest Insurance'

"After two years of deliberation, the military staff committee of the United Nations, realizing the futility of setting up a world police organization as long as the veto is in force, recently reported 'no progress.'

"The fact must be faced that the United Nations could no more prevent a major war now than a 2-year-old child could stop a street corner fight."

Roberts called universal military training "the cheapest insurance we can take."

He said he does not agree with the belief of many people that the United States has 10 or 15 years of security until other nations obtain the atom bomb. Russia, he said, lacks only the manufacturing facilities to make it now.

"1948 or 1949 is the limit," he added, when asked when he thought Russia would have the bomb.

The very existence of the atom bomb, he contended, makes universal training more imperative. He reasoned there will be a need for organized reserves to restore order out of the chaos and disorganization that would follow the first A-bomb attack.

Roberts indorsed, without qualification, the findings of the President's special commission. It advocated universal military training for all American youths when they finish high school or attain the age of 18 years.

And it should be done now, he asserted.

Committee members have indicated privately that they do not plan to act on legislation this session, although hearings are scheduled well into next month. The committee actually has no bill before it.

ICC Told Of $3100 Rental for Bus Terminal

Chief Stockholder Of Arnold Lines Testifies at Rate Increase Hearing

Manuel J. Davis, principal stockholder in the Washington, Virginia & Maryland Coach Co., receives a $3100 monthly rental from the company for use of a terminal which he owns, the Interstate Commerce Commission was told yesterday.

Davis testified he paid either $100,000 or $150,000 for the property. Over a 10-year period, under existing leases, he will receive $334,000 from the firm as rental, the ICC was informed.

The testimony was presented at the close of a week-long hearing on a petition of the firm to boost the interstate fares from 2½ to 5 cents per ride.

Borrowed From Firm

Davis, who is president of the firm's board of trustees, testified further that the company was so bad off financially it borrowed a million dollars last January. He admitted, however, that he borrowed $150,000 from the firm's pension board at 2 per cent interest, later lending the firm $59,000 and $100,000 at 4 and 5 per cent interest, respectively.

He added that he was "not receiving" the 4 or 5 per cent interest, or legal fees due him as general counsel, because of the firm's inadequate financial condition.

"I came to this company in June, 1946, and since then expenses have been within bounds," Davis also asserted.

Earlier, Howard England, company manager, testified Joseph Arnold, the firm president, customarily charged his personal living expenses to the operating expenses of the carrier. ICC investigators estimated these expenses totaled $8453 in the period from January 1, 1946, through May 31, 1947.

Salary, Bonuses Cited

In addition, they found, Arnold received a salary of $18,000 annually and bonuses totaling $16,700 in 1946.

A few minutes before the hearing was ended, company attorneys submitted a request that the suspension order of May 28, 1947, be vacated and the proposed rate boost go into effect "on five days' notice."

Hearing Examiner Tobias Naftalin said the request will be considered. A decision on the petition won't be rendered for several weeks at least.

The rate boost plea has been strongly opposed by Arlington civic groups and the Public Utilities Commission in the county.

Mexican Scientist Brings Skull Believed 15,000 Years Old Here

The skull of an ancient, the Tepexpan man, is examined at the Smithsonian yesterday by Dr. T. D. Stewart, curator of physical anthropology, and Dr. Javier Romero of Mexico. Jawbone of the old inhabitant is at side

The miles between a dried up lake near Mexico City and Washington, geographically speaking, or 15,000 years, chronologically speaking, were spanned by a "man" yesterday.

"He" is the Tepexpan Man, whose mineralized remains are those of the oldest man found in the Western Hemisphere, and perhaps anywhere.

Like Charlie McCarthy, he travels in a box, this one the special care of Dr. Javier Romero, professor of physical anthropology at the National University of Mexico. Dr. Romero, who came by plane, is going to spend several months reconstructing the Tepexpan Man at the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum.

Dr. T. D. Stewart, curator of physical anthropology at the museum and anthropologists from the Natural History Museum in New York City, will work with Dr. Romero.

The remains were found by Dr. Helmut De Terra and A. R. V. Arellano last February, and excavated with the help of Dr. Romero, and are considered the oldest and best authenticated remains yet discovered in the Western Hemisphere.

The Tepexpan Man dates back to the end of the ice age, or pleistocene period, and while it is a climatic change, he had nothing to say about Washington's summer heat.

Father of 5 Gets Chair In Slaying

Lowe's Killer Takes Sentence Calmly; To Die November 21

Floyd P. Wilson, 32-year-old Riverdale, Md., carpenter, yesterday was sentenced to "punishment of death by electricity" for the hold-up slaying of Milton E. Lowe last February.

The slayer, father of five, betrayed no emotion as, manacled to a United States marshal, he heard ssociate Justice Alexander Holtzoff set November 21 as execution date.

The jury which convicted Wilson last week made a strong recommendation for clemency. This will be passed on to President Truman by the court along with a petition for commutation from Defense Counsel Charles E. Ford.

Ford told relatives of Wilson he had grounds for believing that the prosecution would join in asking commutation.

Wilson'es wife, seated among spectators with Wilson'se sister and parents, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Wilson, of Smith County, Va., broke into sobs at the sentence.

Wilson turned and waved reassuringly as he was led out.

House Group Recommends Transferring D. C. Welfare

Subcommittee Plans To Offer Measure Placing Agency Under City Heads

A House District subcommittee yesterday recommended transfer of control over Washington welfare administration to the District Commissioners.

In a final hearing on a bill drafted by the Commissioners and presented by Subcommittee Chairman A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.), members agreed to present the legislation at the next full meeting of the House District Committee.

Raymond F. Clapp, acting director of the Board of Public Welfare, told committee members that the bill would be "a substantial improvement over the present law."

He stated that he favors a change in administration of District of Columbia welfare because "there is a confusion of authority and responsibility between the Commissioners and the board which makes the administration of public welfare difficult."

Clapp cited delays in determining policy and different interpretations of policy which have occurred under the present divided authority. The proposed legislation, he said, appears to provide for a workable department.

Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West presented several amendments to the legislation which were suggested in earlier hearings. These clarify the position of the directors and the functions of the Department of Public Welfare.

Chairman Miller announced at the end of the hearing that the subcommittee will make a study of child care centers in the District. Though legislation has been passed to provide for them for the next year, the District Committee wants further information on the need for and financing of day-care centers.

Prince Georges To Get More State Funds

New Fiscal Program Increases Contribution For School Needs

Prince Georges County will receive an additional $1,320,889.91 from State revenue under the new State fiscal program which becomes effective Tuesday, Governor Lane's office announced yesterday.

This represents the county's share of the more than 20 million dollars to be allocated to political subdivisions of the State for operation of governmental functions and relief from local taxation. The total to be received from new and old State sources will be $2,520,772.73.

Of the increase, $932,897 is for schools, bringing the State contribution for this purpose to $1,840,232. The new school incentive fund adds another $145,574 annually.

Additional road funds, to be divided among incorporated towns on a mileage basis, total $21,197.15, bringing the yearly allocation for highway purposes to $198,686.28. The county's share of the State income tax will be increased by $27,326.44 to $142,385.13 under the new distribution formula.

From racing revenues $113,395.32 will be received and the combined revenues from admissions and recording taxes and licenses, hitherto retained by the State but now to be turned over to the county, total $80,000.

Major sources of the increased funds will be the 2 per cent consumers' sales tax and the 1 cent increase in the State gasoline tax.

During 1945-46

10,800 Pass Health Tests In Schools

More than 10,800 school children passed eHalth Department physical inspections with flying colors during the 1945-46 school year.

This was revealed for the first time yesterday by Health Officer George J. Ruhland in a letter to School Superintendent Hobart Corning.

No visible defects were found in 33.4 per cent of the 32,419 boys and girls examined during that school year, Dr. Ruhland reported.

No Chest X-rays

The routine checkup did not include blood or metabilism tests, chest X-rays or other tests usually made in complete physical examinations, he explained.

Tooth trouble was the most common ailment in youngsters examined, he found. Dental work was needed by 34.3 per cent and effects of poor nutrition were observed in 11 per cent. Only 7 per cent showed indications of lung trouble.

Answers Resolution

Physical inspection were given to both white and Negro children.

Dr. Ruhland's letter was in answer to a resolution adopted by the school board seeking additional funds for school nurses.

He said he doubted if public grants would ever provide enough money for adequate school health service. Teachers, he suggested, ougt to be given medical inspection training so they could aid in discovering and preventing disease among their pupils.

Common Law Wife Slayer Is Sentenced

Abraham Lincoln, Jr., Given 10 to 30 Years After Guilty Plea

Abraham Lincoln, jr., 46, was sentenced yesterday to 10 to 30 years imprisonment for strangling his common-law wife to death.

Lincoln pleaded guilty to second degree murder in District Court. Sentence was imposed by Justice Alexander Holtzoff.

Lincoln told police he suddenly "got mad" when Mrs. Helen R. Scott, 43, of 1250 4th st. sw., put her hands on his neck while he was in bed. According to charges, he first choked her with his hands and then finished the job by wrapping a wet knotted towel around her neck.

In another case, Chester B. Taylor, 19, 1718 9th st. nw., was given five to fifteen years in prison for three burglaries and for assaulting a young woman with a knife in an effort to make her submit to him. His burglary accomplices were John L. Walls, 19, 825 4th st. nw., who received two to six years in prison, and Robert B. Chambers, 19, 520½ 4th st. sw., who received three to nine years.

Truman Signs Bill to Provide Day Care Here

The President yesterday signed legislation continuing operation of Child Day Care Centers under the Board of Public Welfare for another year. Under the bill, the board will be allowed to ask for an appropriation of $150,000 for operation of the centers.

Yesterday the Welfare Board announced their plan for operating the centers if they get the $150,000 appropriation. Last year's appropriation was $250,000, and a number of cuts have been planned.

Six centers will be operated this year instead of the twelve of the past. Three of these will be for Negro children, and three for white. Total capacity of the centers will be about 270 children, compared with 400 last year.

Reduction of forces at the play centers will be made on the same basis as in Federal agencies. A ratio of one teacher to every 10 children will be maintained. Raymond L. Clapp, acting director of the Board, explained that because centers are open 12 hours a day it is necessary to have a greater number of teachers than it would be if they were open only 8 hours.

At yesterday's meeting, members of the Board again stated that they were, in general, opposed to continued operation of the Day Care Centers.

Clapp stated that, though the board considers other items of greater importance at the present time, they want to do a satisfactory job on the centers while they exist. In the discussion, board member Fred S. Kogod said he believed that most District people thought the centers were operated under a Federal grant. Actually, he stated, they are financed out of the District budget.

At the same meeting, Clapp was authorized by board members to approach the Senate Finance Committee if sufficient money for public assistance grants is not appropriated by the House.

Forest Fire Loss Drops 50% in Md.

Damage from forest fires in Maryland dropped 50 per cent during the past spring from the loss suffered a year ago, State Forester H. C. Buckingham announced yesterday.

With a drop in the number of fires from 540 to 331, burned acreage decreased from 6,732 acres to 2,372. The latter figure represents less than one tenth of one per cent of the State's 2,700,000 acres of woodland, he said.

Buckingham gave credit for this fine record to the Department of Forests and Parks' personnel, the introduction of modern fire detection and suppression equipment and the department's year-round campaign in fire prevention.

'Boiler-Maker' Leaves ABC In Quandary

Girl, 16, Consumed Escort's 'Chasers,' Waiter Maintains

When is a "boiler-maker" not a "boiler-maker"?

That was the question facing the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday after it heard charges that waiters at Lotus Restaurant, 727 14th st. nw., had served beer to a 16-year-old girl.

Dorothy Engle, 16, of the 2500 block of 17th st. nw., told the ABC Board she'd been served two bottles of beer when she was in the restaurant with her 15-year-old sister and two sailors.

Wah Seto, Lotus waiter, said he served the beers to go with the sailors' whisky orders and had warned the girls they could have only soft drinks. If Dorothy drank beer, he maintained, it was because the sailors gave her part of their chaser.

Moy D. Pon, head waiter at the restaurant, said he had noted that the girls were under age and had ordered Seto to serve them nothing stronger than cokes.

ABC took the case under advisement.

Capitol Police Aide Ignores Order to Stop

Sergeant-at-Arms Runs Through Guard For Townsendites

If the House sergeant-at-arms enjoys any immunity from policemen, it doesn't say so in Pvt. Robert Kayser's book.

Kayser, a Capitol policeman, put the finger on his boss yesterday for running a police blockade on the Capitol's East plaza. The hue and cry was terrific.

Sergeant-at-Arms William F. Russell, one of the three members of the Capitol Police Board, drove to work and found a police blockade established around rallying Townsendites. On the Townsendites' side of the plaza was Russell's private parking place—and there he headed.

Kayser held up his hand. Then he whistled. Then he got out of the way.

Russell identified himself unmistakably, Kayser said, then wanted to know if the policeman ever saw "a fire chief going to a fire?"

Kayser, who resigned effective July 1 because he has to return to West Virginia to care for a young brother, didn't dally over the fire chief question, but sat down and wrote a "tentative report, which I hope will reach the Capitol Police Board."

Russell later contended "I had a right to go through." The hullabaloo, he said "was that some cop got mad when I went through." He denied hearing the police whistle, but said he saw Kayser waving. "But I was going to my official parking place."

He doesn't plan any disciplinary action, he said.

Reds Adopting Education as Part Of Defense Plan

Harrisonburg, Va., June 27 (AP).—Professor George S. Counts of Columbia University, a specialist in the field of Russian education, said here today that the Soviet Union is adopting education as part of its defense play.

Before th erevolution which brought the Communists into power, he said, there were 8,500,000 Russians in school. Today there are 50,000. He also said there are more Russian children in nursery and kindergarter schools than in all the rest of the world combined.

Speaking at the Fourth Institute on Public Education, the speaker asserted that two myths now are bein gdeveloped in Russia. One is that Russia is the greatest nation in the world and the other is that the rest of the world is "backward."

'Nice-Talking' Women Trick Widow Out of Life's Savings

Mrs. Mamie Reid of Derwood, Md., has lost her life'se savings because she was too eager for good health and good fortune for the rest of her days.

Mrs. Reid

Dabbing her tear-stained eyes with a rumpled handkerchief, the 64-year-old widow told Rockville, Md., police yesterday how two "nice-talking" women in a car bearing Mississippi tags approached her home Tuesday.

As country folks do, Mrs. Reid talked to the women pleasantly for a while, and then one of them asked her how much money she had.

"I told them I didn't have much—only about $2.50," she said. So the woman, after telling Mrs. Reid she "needed someone to pray for her," said she could "bless" the money and it would bring her "good healthfi, good luck and good fortune the rest of her days."

"Then the woman toook a white cloth out of her bag and told me to give her a glass of water, some salt and a piece of bread," Mrs. Reid said.

"She put the bread in the cloth, put some salt on it and, looking at it, said, 'The spirits say you have more money.'"

"By that time I was all twisted up and I believed I was hypnotized," the widow said. "I finally admitted I had $480 in the bank at Rockville."

"She drove me down and when I came out of the bank with the money, the woman asked me to let her hold it. She carefully wrapped it in a piece of newspaper, then wrapped the newspaper up in a cloth and tied it up.

"She was tapping me on the forehead and shoulders saying she was blessing me and then tapped me on the back. I guess I turned my eyes away from money for a second.

"Then she pinned the money inside my dress and told me not to look at it or to tell anyone for three days or the sickness would come and I would have bad luck.

"This morning the three days were up, so I unwrapped the cloth and paper and there was nothing inside. I fell out of my chair, it was such a terrible surprise."

'Target' Mum As Kendrick Wins Delay

Tommy English, member of the defunct Blackface gang, testified yesterday he knows nothing about being the lucky target of the bad shooting of John A. Kendrick, who used to belong to the Tri-State gang.

Kendrick's preliminary hearing on charges of trying to kill English with a .45-caliber automatic June 1, was partially finished yesterday in Municipal Court. At 5 p. m., Judge Aubrey Fennell continued the case until Monday.

Kendrick told police he argued with English over a woman prior to the shooting. Kendrick added that if he ever got another chance, he would "shoot English's head off," police say.

But English denied any enmity to Kendrick. He told the judge that all he knew about the "so-called shooting" was that he heard a "commotion" outside his 10th st. apartment and didn't find out about the shooting until police visited him.

Pvt. William R. Shelton testified he took Kendrick to the Second Precinct Station, where English was waiting. Shelton said Kendrick, who was manacled, "went into a rage" and tried to butt and kick English.

5 Ambulance Drivers Lose Jobs Tuesday

Personnel cuts Tuesday will halve the Health Department's night-time emergency ambulance service, health officials revealed yesterday.

Five temporary ambulance drivers will be discharged, making it possible to man only one emergency ambulance between 4 p. m. and 8 a. m., they said. At present, two ambulances are available for emergency calls 24 hours a day.

The Health Department cut will mean more work for ambulances of the Fire Department and Emergency and Casualty hospitals, they pointed out.

Staff curtailment was ordered because Congress is not expected to authorize salary payments for the five drivers after the end of the current fiscal year, officials explained.

Those scheduled to lose their jobs were hired when the Health Department shifted its drivers from a 48-hour to a 40-hour week in July, 1946, David H. Fry, assistant director of the Hospital Permit Bureau, reported.

Training Field At Sandy Point Is Approved

By The Associated Press

A three-million-dollar appropriation for construction of a Naval Academy training field at Sandy Point, near Annapolis, Md., was recommended yesterday by a House Armed Services Subcommittee which authorized a 13-million-dollar project for that purpose.

Navy officials at hearings earlier this week said that the training field was "the most pressing need" at the academy at this time.

Some residents of the area opposed the Navy plan. The subcommittee report will be reviewed by the full committee next Tuesday.

Lake Success, N. Y., June 27 (U.P.).—The United Nations spread a photographic exhibit of the tour of its Balkans investigating commission across a wall of the delegates' lounge today as debate started on the Balkans dispute.

It was a photograph of a big, tousle-haired Greek guerilla of the kind which the United States charged was trained, equipped and clothed by Yugoslavia, Albania and Bulgaria.

What startled delegates was the guerilla's uniform blouse. It was strictly GI—American—with a big brass button bearing the emblem of the U. S. Army glinting in the sunlight.

Gardeners Given Advice on Control Of Mexican Beetle

Blacksburg, Va., June 27 (AP).—Gardeners got some tips today on controlling the annual invasion of the Mexican bean beetle from Entomologist J. O. Rowell of the Agricultural Extension Service.

Rowell listed applications of three-fourths per cent rotenone dust or a spray of 10 pounds of 4 per cent rotenone dust in three gallons of water as effective controls.

Recommended for home gardeners was a combination three-fourths per cent rotenone and 5 per cent copper spray to give protection against the Mexican beetle, most other insects and common plant diseases.

Rowell advised using 3 per cent nicotine dust or a spray of black leaf 40 where plant lice are noted on leafy vegetables. He added, however, that nicotine sprays or dusts should not be applied until the lice appear.

To control harlequin cabbage bug, squash bug and green soldier bug, Rowell advised use of a 20 per cent sabodilla dust.

In Maryland and Virginia

Va. Ready to Resume Examination of Autos

By The Associated Press

State Police reported yesterday that inspection stations throughout Virginia would be prepared to resume the semiannual examination of motor vehicles Tuesday and urged motorists to make early arrangements to avoid the rush.

For this initial period of inspection, owners will have two full months, July and August, for obtaining their inspection stickers, which again must be displaced on windshields as was the case prior to the wartime suspension of the safety inspection program. Thus, motorists will not be ticketed for failure to have the stickers until after September 1.

However, Capt. W. L. Groth, safety engineer for the Department of State Police, suggested that motorists who wish to drive in, have prompt inspections, and drive out with the mechanics' okay would do well to contact certified inspection stations now and make appointments.

Approximately 1250 stations will be approved to make the examinations. Under present plans, the next inspection will take place in January, 1948, with the series continuing each six months thereafter, as before the war.

W. Va. County Rejects Bill From Loudoun

Charles Town, W. Va., June 27 (AP).—The Jefferson County Commissioners today turned thumbs down for the time being at least on a bill for $500 presented by Loudoun County, Virginia, for "services rendered" in identifying 50 persons killed when a Capital Airlines plane crashed near the State line June 13.

Dr. W. P. Frazer, Loudoun County coroner, said he climbed up a mountain to perform the official duties under an agreement with his opposite number, Dr. G. P. Morison, coroner of Jefferson County.

The plane crashed just inside the West Virginia line, but the bodies were removed to Leesburg, Va., for identification. West Virginia got a bill asking a $10 fee in each death.

Counsel advised the Jefferson County Commissioners West Virginia law provides only a $5 fee for an inquest. The attorney said the commissioners might allow Dr. Morison mileage and the fee for one inquest although he decided after a trip to the scene no inquest was necessary.

Attorney General Says Coroner Must Stay Home

Richmond, Va., June 27 (AP).—The jurisdiction of a coroner in Virginia extends only to the limits of the county or city for which he is appointed, Attorney General A. P. Staples ruled today.

In an opinion requested by Dr. Herbert S. Breyfogle, the State's chief medical examiner, the attorney general gave answers as to specific circumstances where a coroner might be called, and said that "the determining factor as to the jurisdiction of the coroner is the place where the death occurs."

"This," Staples said, "altered the previous act under which, if it appeared that an injury received in some other county caused the death, the coroner of such other county would be called.

Dr. Breyfogle also inquired as to what determined the source of a coroner's fee after he takes charge and makes an investigation. In reply, the attorney general cited Section 4818 (10) of the Code, which states that for each investigation, including making of required reports, a coroner "shall receive a fee of $10, this to be paid by the county or city for which he is appointed."

"As a coroner can only make such investigation when the death occurs in his city 'or county,' Staples added, "then the place of death does, in effect, determine the source of the fees."

Harvest Wheat Later by Combine, Agronomist Says

Blacksburg, Va., June 27 (AP).—Agronomist M. H. McVicker of the Agricultural Experiment Station today reminded farmers wheat harvest by combine should be more mature than when cut by binder.

To prevent heating of grain harvested with a combine and sent directly to a bin, McVicker said, it should not be cut until the moisture content is down to about 18 per cent.

The proper stage has been reached, he added, when all greenness has disappared from the field, when the head of wheat is bent at the base and drooping, and when the head will shatter when tapped in the palm of the hand.

He said the stage for binder cutting usually comes about two weeks earlier than the combine stage.

Critics Want Art to Be Appropriate

Because the people portrayed in murals in the Social Security Building, "look pathetic" and "are in poor circumstances," some critics believe the pictures are not appropriate for the Federal agencies now using the building.

These critics are staff members of the Federal Security Administration, which wrote the Public Buildings Administration suggesting the possibility of the murals being covered up and something more appropriate being substituted.

Something, say, appropriate to the work of the FSA, Public Health Service, Office of Education and the Food and Drug Administration, now quartered in the building, and, of course, more cheerful.

Subject matter is the root of the problem, not the modern style of painting, which recently caused such an uproar from domestic critics that the State Department called home its collection of modern paintings just as it was starting a foreign tour.

Mrs. Ruth Thorne, assistant to the director of information for FSA, said last night that there had been no suggestion of obliterating the murals, by Artist Ben Shahn.

"The pictures are inappropriate, though, because they were designed to represent the needy for whom the Social Security Act provids public assistance, and the original intention was that the building be occupied only by the Social Security Board," she said, indicating that these were her personal views."

"Take any picture," a PBA spokesman said, "some people like it, some don't. But we don't want to get into a fight with the FSA."

Improvements Slated for Va., N. C. Rivers

By The Associated Press

North Carolina and Virginia rivers will be improved more than four million dollars worth next year if Congress approves the recommendation made yesterday by the House Appropriations Committee.

The largest sum recommended for them in the year beginning July 1 is $3,800,000 to continue construction of the $57,730,000 Buggs Island dam on the Roanoke River in the two States.

A total of four million dollars Buggs Island project, authorized in 1944, for power, navigation and flood control as first of a series of dams planned for the Roanoke River and its tributaries, including the Dan, Staunton and Smith rivers.

For Virginia also the committee recommended $80,000 to complete work begun on the James River by the Federal Government in 1870. This money would be used after July 1 to dredge a turning basin at Richmond, which General Wheler said, would be 600 feet long and 18 feet deep.

Wheeler said allotments to date for this riaver project amounted to $6,728,400 and that total cost is to be about one million dollars less than the original estimate. He added that an appropriation in 1945 allowed removal of remaining rock shoals from the mouth of the river to Hopewell and from the Richmond deep-water terminal to the lock gate and for the turning basin.

The committee also recommended $45,000 for construction of a small-boat harbor at Crisfield, Md., but provided no funds for other requested Maryland projects, which included completion of the Savage River Dam in the western part of the State.

The Crisfield project was one of a group recommended in the War Department civil functions appropriations bill.

Bennett, Once Canada Prime Minister, Dies

London, June 27 (U.P.).—Viscount Bennett, 76, former Canadian Prime Minister and lifelong champion of preferential tariffs within the British Empire, died last night at his dream home, Juniper Hill, at Mickleham, Surrey.

Viscount Bennett

Lord Bennett, who would have celebrated his seventy-seventh birthday, July 3, was found dead in his bath with his head above water. It was believed death was due to heart failure. The butler said he saw Lord Bennett in his bath last night.

Lord Bennett's last public appearance was Wednesday when the Royal Society of Arts reelected him president.

Lord Bennett, a deeply religious bachelor, first saw his Mickleham dream house in 1930—the year he was named Prime Minister of Canada—but it was not until nine years later that he came to reside in it.

He was first admitted to the bar at the age of 23 at Calgary, Alberta. In 1911, at the age of 41, he became a member of the Canadian Parliament.

Leader of Canada's Conservative Party from 1927 to 1938, he was Prime Minister of the Dominion from 1930 to 1935.

Watergate Crowd Hails Mitchell

Beethoven: Egmont Overture; Handel: Largo; Mendelssohn: Violin Concerto; Chopin: Polonaise; Debussy: Afternoon of a Faun; Dvorak: Slavonic Dances; Strauss: Tales from the Vienna Woods. National Symphony Orchestra, Howard Mitchell, conductor; Angel Reyes, violinist. Thursday evening, Watergate.

By Paul Hume

Howard Mitchell, associate conductor of the National Symphony, and one of its guest conductors for the summer concerts, made his first appearance of the series last night.

With a program designed to attract lovers of familiar light works, he drew the finest kind of playing from the orchestra. Mitchell had for his soloist Angel Reyes, Cuban violinist, playing the Mendelssohn concerto. In that portion of the work which time permitted our hearing, Reyes displayed an unusually large tone of rich quality, managed with ease and sure technique.

Bach: Chromatic Fantasy and Fugue; Sonata in B Minor for flute and piano; Three chorales with keyboard variations; piano concerto in D Major. Agi Jambor, pianist, with Olga Bloecher, flautist; Paul Chandler Hume, baritone, and string ensemble. Arts Club.

As if to prove that summer musical fare need not be all froth, the Arts Club drew an overflowing audience to hear Agi Jambor, pianist, in a program of works of Beach.

Miss Jambor confirmed the impression made at her recent Phillips Gallery concert in displaying even finer musicianship, and a strong affection for and understanding of the music of Bach. Her conception of his music is remarkably virile, yet colored with rare delicacy of feeling. At times it becomes more romantic than some schools of thought might approve, but it is always beautiful.

Olga Bloecher played one of the difficult flute sonatas with free, lovely tone, and excellent phrasing. Three chorales, on which Miss Jambor played Bach's variations, were sung by Paul Chandler Hume. The concert closed with an exciting performance of the D Major keyboard concerto, in which Miss Jambor directed her own accompanying orchestra of 13 strings.

Summer Slimming Schedule

Alcoholic Calorie Capers Are Problem for Dieters

This is the sixth of a series of 10 articles on reducing in summer.

By Ida Jean Kain

SUMMER slimming really would be a breeze if it were not for the tinkle of ice in tall glasses and the persistent cajolery on the part of the host and hostess who refuse to take no for an answer, first or second.

"Oh, come now, it will cool you off," he will insist, forcing a glass into your more or less reluctant hands.

"Here, you can't fly on one wing," is the affable, but firm, follow up.

"Then just let me sweeten that up a bit," is another way around it.

"Oh, you need more ice," the hostess interjects, placing a fresh glass in your hands.

Apparently many of you have bumped up against this situation, for I get repeated requests for the caloric content of various beverages ranging from beer to champagne, and at this season the Collins family, Tom, John and Rum, are in high favor.

Sad News

Many of the requests are from reducers who are earnestly struggling to keep their calories on the safe and svelte side, and who ask if a beer, or perhaps two, will spoil the effects of the diet and to please let them know by next Saturday night.

The scientific fact about alcohol is that it cannot be stored as fat. So, a beer, even two, couldn't make weight, or keep the reducer from losing as per schedule . . . provided they replace some food in the menu of equal caloric value. But alcohol does not furnish repair or building material. It cannot take the place of any of the foods furnishing essential nutrients. And since it takes 1000 calories to include the protective foods, and the average reducing diet for women is not more than 1200 calories a day, this doesn't leave much margin for calories to be spent for pure conviviality. When a drink replaces a dessert, the dieter comes out even.

To be able to take a drink, or leave it, solves the whole thing on spirited beverages, from every standpoint. And so, in the interest of weight control, as well as other phases, I would like to propose that every host and hostess take the pledge . . . to graciously allow a guest the privilege of accepting a drink or refusing, without comment. Better yet, to serve tomato juice and orange juice on the same tray with other beverages. The same privilege, by the way, should be afforded every host or hostess.

Election of officers and tour of the Folger Shakespearean Library today will close the biennial convention of the Eastern District of the National Story League held here this week at the Willard Hotel.

Highlight of the convention was the banquet last night in the Congressional Room, when Mrs. Ruth Sawyer Durand, author and lecturer, was guest of honor. Mrs. Durand, who flew here from her home in Hancock, Me., related a group of folk tales of other lands, including Spain, Germany and China. Miss Edith Allnutt presided and Miss Barbara Leef contributed piano selections.

Yesterday morning's schedule was devoted to business sessions and a story-telling period by delegates from Florida, Virginia and Maryland. In the afternoon Dr. Richard R. Hutcheson, director Washington Speech Academy, gave a technical discussion of the physiology and anatomy of voice and Miss Julia Williamson, children's librarian from the Free Library of Philadelphia, recommended books for the story-teller.

Diplomats Chalk Up Red-Letter Party Day

By Elizabeth Maguire

ONLY THE indefatigable should live in Washington these days. Yesterday three agreeable cocktail parties were given at the same time. Some diplomats went to one, some to another, and a few to all three.

The Australians gathered at the embassy to bid farewell to three staff members, who are returning home in the near future. The Charge d'Affaires of Uruguay and his beautiful wife, Senora de Mora, entertained for the new United States Ambassador to Uruguay and Mrs. Ellis Briggs; and the Indian Ambassador, Asaf Ali, gave a party just for the fun of giving one.

Among the smartly dressed women at the Mora party was Senora de Espinosa de los Monteros, wife of the Mexican Ambassador. She wore a cool gray striped dress and crisp little white straw hat with upturned brim. Other dazzling ladies included Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador; Mme. Martins, wife of the Ambassador of Brazil, and Senora de Belt, wife of the Cuban Ambassador.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Alexander Van Keuren were there, and the Ambassador of Honduras and Senora de Caceres. Also, the Colombian Ambassador and Senora de Restrepo-Jaramillo, Mrs. Randolph Huntington Miner, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Marshall Greer, Pierre Boal, the Ambassador of Bolivia, Ricardo Martinez Vargas and the Minister of Peru and Senora de Fernandez-Davila.

The Minister's daughter, Miss Gladys Mora, assisted in greeting the guests. Senora de Mora's son, Juan Antonio Mora, was also there.

Novikov at Indian Embassy

The first couple we ran into on the terrace of the Indian Embassy was the Russian Ambassador and Mme. Novikov. She wore no hat with her pretty navy blue dress, trimmed with white starched lace. She and the Ambassador were laughing about the amusing picture in Life Magazine this week of the Ambassador at the British Embassy garden party.

Later, Mme. Novikov chatted with Mrs. Andrews, wife of the South African Minister, while Ambassador Novikov held an absorbing talk with the Secretary General of the Arab League, Azzam Pasha.

Others on the Persian-carpeted terrace were the Afghan Minister, Abdel Hosayn Aziz, the Ambassador of Italy and Signora Tarchiani, and Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim. There were the usual assortment of lovely saris in different colors—chartreuse and gold, powder blue and silver, and a Hattie Carnegie print worn by Mrs. M. O. A. Baig, wife of the First Secretary. The Ambassador looked very natty in a brown suit with white shoes.

Garden Party

The Australian Ambassador and Mrs. Makin received their guests in the air-cooled entrance hall of the Embassy. Refreshments were served in the garden, under a huge oak tree which formed a natural tent of shade. The three staff members who are departing—John Oldham, Counselor; J. B. Brigden, Economic Counselor, and L. R. McIntyre, First Secretary—stood with their wives to receive with the Ambassador. Mrs. Oldham was not there as she is already at sea on her way to Australia.

Mr. and Mrs. Fleay, who are leaving today for Australia, dropped by to say good-by to the Ambassador and Mrs. Makin. They feel satisfied that the three platpuses they presented to the Bronx Zoo have settled down happily into the platypusery, and they can be on their way. Platypuses, they explained, are freak things from Australia—with duck bills, webbed feet and furry bodies.

Other guests at this pleasant garden party included the Minister of New Zealand and Lady Berendsen, the Minister of South Africa and Mrs. Andrews, the Minister of India and Mrs. Sen, Lady Wilson, Admiral Sir Henry Moore, Representative and Mrs. Abe Goff, Alfred Stirling, Minister of the Embassy and his sister, Miss Dorothy Stirling, and Embassy Attache and Mrs. Bridges.

Gen. Wedemeyer Feted At Reunion Party

ABOUT 75 officers who served in the China-Burma-India theater, and their wives, gave a reunion party at the Bolling Field Officers Club last night in honor of their former commander in chief, Gen. A. C. Wedemeyer, and Mrs. Wedemeyer.

Following cocktails, a buffet dinner was served and the Army Air Forces Band played for dancing. In the receiving line, in addition to General and Mrs. Wedemeyer, were Col. and Mrs. Mason Lucas and Maj. and Mrs. Maurice Levin. Also among those present were Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Henry S. Aurand and Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Alvin R. Luedecke.

Achesons Honored At Luncheon

THE UNDERSECRETARY of State and Mrs. Dean Acheson were the guests in whose honor the Australian Ambassador and Mrs. Makin entertained Wednesday at a luncheon party at the Embassy. Present at the luncheon were the heads of the British Commonwealth Missions in Washington from Canada, South Africa, Ireland, India, New Zealand and the United Kingdom.

Ask Anne — Your Questions on Homemaking

Could you tell me how to remove lipstick from a chenille bedspread and from a wooden floor? H. B. C.

To remove lipstick from the bedspread, first work vaseline or lard into the stain to loosen it. Then either sponge with carbon tetrachloride or dip stained part in a bowl of this cleaning fluid. If a trace of the stain still remains after this treatment, try sponging it with denatured alcohol. Dilute the alcohol if your spread is of colored material. Use one cup of denatured alcohol to two cups of water.

Carbon tetrachloride may be used in removing the lipstick stain from the floor, too. If the floor is of unfinished wood and the spot is stubborn, you can also use household cleanser and steel wool.

I gardened in a pink cotton chambray dress and got it quite soiled. How can I cleanse it of the dried mud stains? D. R. C.

If you haven't yet washed your dress, first brush the dried mud stains well. Launder, or sponge the spots with soap and water. If traces of stain remain, sponge with a solution of one cup of denatured alcohol to two cups of water.

How can I keep the outside of my aluminum teakettle clean and smooth and dissolve the coating that has formed inside? Also, my husband has a thick aluminum cup which is badly encrusted where water has stood in it. What can be done? A. D. L.

Fine steel wool pads and soap can be used in cleaning the outside of your teakettle unless it is of the highly polished type of aluminum. On polished surfaces, use cream, liquid, or paste polish to restore the sheen.

The lime deposits that are formed inside teakettles and other utensils by the water in certain localities can be removed with a strong vinegar solution. Fill the vessel with a mixture of half vinegar and half water. Bring the solution to a boil, then remove from the stove. Let the utensil stand with the solution in it for several hours or, better still, overnight. This will soften the deposit so that it can be scraped off easily. A wooden spoon is best for this purpose. Steel wool pads and soap can be used in further cleaning and smoothing the inside of the kettle and cup.

I would appreciate knowing what to use on the dust rag in dusting waxed furniture. I dislike using furniture polish because it makes the wood feel sticky. A plain cloth isn't satisfactory either. I would also like to know how and what to use in cleaning brass and pewter.

I think you'll find that "treated" dusters are much more satisfactory than plain cloths for dusting. Here's one way to treat dust rags at home to make them lintless and "dustless": Soak clean, soft cloths in a mixture of a quart of water, a tablespoon of turpentine and two tablespoons of kerosene. Then wring out the cloths and let them dry thoroughly before using.

Dust cloths may also be treated as follows: Put a tablespoon of furniture polish in a glass jar and shake well. Stuff in clean cloths, close the jar and leave it overnight. Remove the cloths and let them dry well before using.

In cleaning brass, use a special metal polish and a soft cloth. Embossed or carved designs may be cleaned with a brush. Pewter should be washed with soap and very hot water and buff well with a soft, clean cloth. If pewter has become tarnished, use silver polish.

I have learned sewing as a profession and know it. I have worked along this line for several years, and I want to take it up again. I would like to have an idea of what is being charged now for good sewing? I would like to make over two mattresses, but I cannot find a place that sells the supplies. Yet it seems to me there must be a place where one could buy these articles. Can you help me? M. G.

Since dressmaker's prices vary with location, I am afraid I can't be of much help to you on that score. For instance, in trying to get an answer, I found a range of from $7.50 to $30 dollars for making a dressy dress. Why don't you question women who have had sewing done in the location in which you expect to do business?

If your mattresses were made of long-staple cotton, this can be reworked and fluffed by putting it in the sun. Tufting needles are imported from England, but you may be able to get something to serve the purpose from a harness dealer. You may also be able to get the thread with which to tuft there. For any further help, contact the textile and clothing section, Extension Service, United States Department of Agriculture. Through their home demonstration agents they conducted a mattress-making project during the war and would be in a position to give you help.

Can you tell me how to protect a Chinese red lacquered and painted screen from losing its lacquer? The heat and the dampness of winter heating and summer weather has caused the lacquer to buckle and some of it is falling off. I am sure any handling of the screen would cause much more of the lacquer to fall off. J. D. T.

I would suggest you take your screen to a reliable furniture restorer.

What is the best method of removing an old paint stain from a child's dress? M. C.

To remove old paint stains from a washable dress, saturate the stain with turpentine and roll up until paint softens. Sponge with additional turpentine and launder.

Va. Secretary To Quit State Post July 15

Richmond, Va., June 27 (AP).—Governor Tuck announced the resignation today of M. W. Armistead 3d, as Secretary of the Commonwealth, the appointment of Mrs. Thelma Y. Gordon to replace him, and the appointment of Carter O. Lowance, veteran Virginia newspaperman, as his new executive secretary.

Armistead's resignation will become effective July 15, and he will return to the editorial department of the Times-World Corp. in Roanoke.

Mrs. Gordon, who several times has acted as secretary of the Commonwealth, will move up to this position on July 16.

The Governor expressed his "deep regret" at losing his combination executive-secretary and secretary of the Commonwealth, but said he felt fortunate in having at hand an experienced State worker. Mrs. Gordon, who is "fully qualified by reason of her long experience for the position."

Lowance will take over as executive secretary July 7, leaving the Richmond Bureau of the Associated Press after an 11-year assignment here.

Runaway Boy Rides Clinging To Train Roof

Baltimore, June 27 (AP).—Railroaders shuddered when they heard the story today and said it was "impossible," but 16-year-old Edward Dixon arrived in Baltimore atop a coach of a fast Baltimore & Ohio passenger train.

Railroad police removed him, covered with soot which penetrated through his clothing clear to the skin, when the express pulled in from Philadelphia.

There wasn't a hand-hold on the top of the coach, but Eddie still clutched a cardboard box which contained a change of clothing, his grandmother's picture, his grade school diploma, and a lock of hair.

"Who's the girl?" asked an officer, thumbing the lock of hair.

"Sir, that was no girl. That was my collie, Fritz. She died."

Police Lieut. Edward T. Coughlin said Eddie told him he had taken "French leave" from a farm near Oxford, Pa., where he had been working for two years under the supervision of authorities at Glen Mills School. He told the officer he had been sent to the school for 15 months by a juvenile court at Reading, Pa.

"I was getting 25 cents a week spending money," Eddie explained. "I'm old enough to be helping my mother now. That's not enough money." The boy said his parents were divorced. A welfare agency has Eddie in charge pending a check with Pennsylvania authorities on his status.

Cheltenham's Need for New Head Stressed

Baltimore, June 27 (AP).—Appointment of a new superintendent of the Cheltenham School for Boys was given top priority on the list of needs of the institution today.

A conference attended by members of the school's board of managers, the Board of Public Welfare and Governor Lane also agreed it was necessary to improve the physical facilities of Cheltenham and set up a clear definition of responsibility for running the institution.

It was brought out that for almost two years Cheltenham has had an acting superintendent who, because of his temporary position, has not had sufficient authority for proper management of the Prince Georges County institution. The acting head, H. R. Harris, told the meeting he would be willing to remain as assistant superintendent.

The State Employment Commission recently set up an eligibility list for the post. Topping the list, it was said, was an Eastern Shore war veteran who, though qualified, lacks institutional experience.

Lane told the group that State Engineer John B. Funk had started a survey of the building needs of the school and stated that "Whatever is necessary to straighten out Cheltenham, I'll undertake to get."

Former Official Of Union Guilty Of Tax Evasion

New York, June 27 (AP).—James V. Bove, 48-year-old former vice president of the International Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers Union (AFL), pleaded guilty in Federal Court today to two indictments alleging evasion of $85,000 in income taxes for 1939-1941 and was fined $30,000 and ordered imprisoned for five years by Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard.

The jail term is to run concurrently with two prison terms now being served by Bove in New York State—One of 10 to 20 years for stealing $60,000 of the funds of Local 60 of the Hodcarriers Union, and the other of eight and one-half to 16 years for extorting money from contractors on the New York City Delaware Aqueduct project.

Assistant U. S. Attorney Bruno Schachner said the two State sentences are being served consecutively so that Bove will not be eligible for parole for a least 12½ years.

Robert W. Mavity, Fairfax High School athletic coach, said that he planned to arrange an intercommunity baseball league for boys under 14.

Petitions Seek Referendum On Elgin Job

Annapolis, Md., June 27 (AP).—It looks as if it will be up to the people of Maryland to decide whether Motor Vehicles Commissioner W. Lee Elgin will continue in office until May 30, 1949.

A new set of petitions containing 6048 voters' signatures was filed today with the Secretary of State calling for a referendum on a 1947 General Assembly act to oust Elgin on Monday.

The petitions were brought to Annapolis soon after another set was filed to seek a referendum on an act outlawing marriage ceremony solicitation in Cecil County.

Attorney Paul Berman of Baltimore brought the Elgin petitions to the office today, adding to the 6640 signatures already filed.

If the entire lot is certified, it will be up to a people's vote next year to decide whether Elgin could be ousted before May 30, 1949.

The term of Elgin, an appointee of former Governor Herbert R. O'Conor, was extended through part of Governor Lane's administration by act of the 1945 General Assembly.

The last General Assembly, however, passed a bill to end Elgin's term Monday.

The petitioners opposing the Cecil County Act outlawing wedding ceremony solicitation filed 13 papers containing 243 signatures. A total of 807 signatures was needed under the law. On May 29 petitions bearing 775 names were submitted.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Now Secretary of State Marshall Takes Naps On Spot Where Nation's Top Secrets Reposed

By Drew Pearson

"The District Line" by Bill Gold is being suspended during Bill's vacation.

Safe-Keeping — When Secretary of State Marshall moved into the new State Department Building—formerly the War Department—he found next to his office a giant safe. The huge air-conditioned vault was designed to keep the Nation's most secret military plans. Marshall, a practical man, who, unlike some other people, believes the war is over, figured there were plenty of other places to hide secrets . . . So if you drop into Marshall's office at about 2 p. m., you will find, not war secrets in the huge safe, but a comfortable cot with the Secretary of State spread out on it. Marshall believes in a 20-minute nap immediately after lunch. To this, Mrs. Marshall attributes her husband's ability to remain relatively fresh despite the hectic war years.

Appeasing Labor—Republican leaders are worried over their alienation of labor—so much so that they have trotted out one piece of legislation which no one ever expected to see at this congressional session—the minimum wage act . . . For months, Florida's Senator Pepper and other New Dealers have been trying to boost the minimum wage from 40 to 60 cents an hour. But Republicans balked . . . Now, to appease labor and win over the poorest paid one-third-of-the-Nation, Speaker Joe Martin and Senator Bob Taft have dusted off the minimum wage bill and hope to ram it through Congress at this session.

The Wrath Department—Ire and indignation have blazed around the White House, thanks to former court jester George Allen and former President-maker Jim Farley with their "kiss and tell" literature. President Truman was plenty steamed up over Allen's Saturday Evening Post epic on "two years with Truman." The man angriest at Farley for his Roosevelt revelations is Democratic Press Agent Emeritus Charlie Michelson. Charlie's characterization of Farley is unprintable.

Allen

New Presidential Voice—Credit White House Radio Adviser J. Leonard Reinsch with the big improvement in President Truman's radio voice. After long and patient study Reinsch found that the trouble with Truman's radio personality was that he talked too fast. Reinsch experimented with a number of gadgets, including a moving tape, before he clicked with the present successful formula. Now Reinsch has Truman's speeches type in large letters with only one sentence to a page. He has also convinced Mr. Truman that no station would ever cut the President of the United States off the air, no matter how slow his speech, and that he can take all the time he wants. Result: Truman now emphasizes every phrase, speaks easily, rarely stumbles.

Marshall's "Face-Lifting"—When diplomats first called on Secretary of State Marshall in his new building—formerly the War Department—military murals stared down upon them. Guns, tanks, belching artillery adorned the walls. Marshall, now a builder of peace, tried to get rid of the murals, but found the law was against him. He could not alter them without an Act of Congress. So he has now ordered rich green draperies hung over the works of Mars outside his own office. The murals in the main entryway, however, are too big to cover.

Miscellaneous Memos.—The Interstate Commerce Commission will soon raise freight car rates about $5 per car a day . . . Large business firms no longer think of RFC financing, turn instead to the banks and insurance companies. Metropolitan Life just loaned Johns-Manville 25 million dollars . . . The Senate's lukewarm probe of the steel black market will be moved to California as soon as Congress recesses. There is growing criticism that Pennsylvania's Senator Martin, a great friend of the Mellon interests, is soldiering on any real probe of steel . . . Latest figures on housing show that the number of new homes started in May totaled 69,000—a jump of 300 over the April figure . . . Though the Government is paying out millions in subsidies to farmers and producers of lead, copper and zinc, talk of a subsidy to increase steel capacity is still considered heresy . . . Louis Bean, economic adviser to Secretary of Agriculture Anderson, says that full employment is impossible without an increase in steel-production capacity.

Ickes' Old Battle

It has now been over a year since Harold Ickes resigned as Secretary of the Interior in a bitter fight against the appointment of Ed Pauley as Undersecretary of th Navy. But only this week the basic issue in that fight was finally settled by the Supreme Court—and Ickes won.

The issue was whether the Federal Government or the oil companies—through friendly State governments—could harvest the mineral wealth on the ocean floor adjoining the coast of the United States.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

The Bridge Deck

By Florence Osborn

You are declarer of today's four-heart contract and West opens a diamond; East takes with the ace and returns a club. How do you play?

Declarer wins his game by end-playing East. He wins the club return and lays down the ace of hearts, discovering the 3-0 break. Since East has a certain trump trick, South plans to throw him in with it so that he can receive a favorable return which will limit his spade losers to one.

Declarer lays down the king of hearts, then leads out his clubs. East can ruff the fourth round (if he discards, South throws him in with a heart lead), but he must then lead a spade, giving North the king, or a diamond, letting declarer discard a spade and ruff on the board.

Either way declarer wins his four-heart contract, losing a diamond, heart and spade. If South leads spades himself in hopes of finding the ace with West, he'll lose a second spade trick for down-one.

Portraits

By James J. Metcalfe

You are my joy

The stars are in the cloudless sky. . . . The moon is in its place . . . And in my dream tonight I see . . . The vision of your face . . . The picture of a day we spent . . . Beside a lake of blue . . . Where everything was beautiful . . . And marvelously new . . . And when the sun went down and when . . . The stars invited me . . . I held you gently in my arms . . . And kissed you lovingly . . . I told you that my happiness . . . Would always be assured . . . Because my love for you would last . . . As long as life endured . . . And though the moon is older and . . . The stars are not the same . . . I spell my greatest gladness with . . . The letters of your name.

GO 4th . . . IN YOUNG COTTONS

Send your daughters celebrating on their long 4th of July week-end. Dress 'em all in cotton! Cottons as crisp as a fire-cracker. Cottons as bright as a sparkler. Cottons as tubbable as they are lovable. Just round up your little girls . . . head 'em to The Hecht Co.'s Tots', Girls', and Teens' Shops . . . then let 'em go gloriously 4th, dressed in cottons!
